Paris, just that lifefull peoples here had to find "new" things to talk about, just staying alive. For me, to meet all these beautiful people here with our writings up against the years, since Chuck gave the Parissite life, have been and is an honour. It's people like you and the other long travellers here, staying out long with each others good and bad behavings and meanings, that's giving a world a better life.

Take care Nappy and yes, the life is too short to not take care of people we have got good feelings for. So I believe it's not your last words here anyway, with or without Paris.

>Hi All, I don't usually post this stuff, but what the heck.

I think this captures most of Canada's feelings about Bush perfectly.

<http://www.thestar.com/Canada/Columnist/article/349621>

What bothers me about it is that I think it is dead wrong. I think Bush has succeeded beautifully.

He hates the welfare state, so he intentionally bankrupted it with tax cuts and a war, and he intentionally made it look like government can't come through for people by abandoning New Orleans.

He wants to make more money for his friends in the oil business, so he intentionally stirred the middle eastern pot to drive up oil prices.

He knows that government can keep control by keeping the populous scared, so he's intentionally failing in Afghanistan. After all, who would the enemy be if Bin Laden and his boys were really defeated?

What could be a better cover for complete evil than fake stupidity and incompetence?

What do you guys think?

MikeHi Nappy,

This is a sad day. I'll miss seeing your name on the newsgroup.

Is there anything we could do to get you back in the PARIS fold? I'm steadily working my way through the first hall algo from the DP/Pro. There is another one after than, and then I want to do the plates. Could we coax you back to PARIS for the effects?

All the best!

Mike

Sorry My Dear Sarah. I'll be taking my memory pill now...

it ironic that reviews of his presidency simultaneously paint him as both stupid and the genius mastermind of his administration. Which is it?

To say he is intentionally failing in Afghanistan is an insult to those of us fighting the war. If there were an easy way to defeat UBL and his boys, I assure you that would be done. Unfortunately, they are well holed up in Pakistan, and with the delicate relationship we have with that country, it would probably be a true disaster to go marching in there. Somehow, I believe the Bush's inability to bag UBL will be the biggest failure he will admit to in his presidency, just as not bagging Saddam was his daddy's. Maybe future President Jenna Bush will avenge her father!

In reality, anyone who thinks the demise of UBL will remove the threat of Al-Quaida, really doesn't understand how these groups function. Similarly, if the president suddenly not around, would our government cease to function?

The situation in New Orleans was certainly majorly FUBAR, but the local leaders have to share the blame with the Feds. That does not excuse the mess that has ensued, however.

Of course, things can't be too bad in Canada. Your dollar is worth more against the US dollar than it has been in 40 years. Hooray, since my parent's pension is from the University of Toronto. Funny how things balance out.

If you want the Konnekt to work on a lower budget laptop your gonna have fun time.

This is were the laptop will tend to be cutting the most corners to keep the cost down.

You probably gonna be paying in the $1200 and up range for stuff that tend to have the more compatible chip sets.

Here is what you want to find on a laptop that will more than likely be compatible with the TC.

Intel chipset

Non- shared video graphics

If you it is shared memory then the Intel graphic chip work well

Be able to put 2 gigs of memory. Support for 4 gigs would be better though.

Things you want:

Texas Instruments Fire wire chipset

Non shared video graphics. (Intel ones are OK but if you plan on anything like games forget it.)

Intel chipset

express 34/54 slot.

at least 2 USB 2.0 slots

Win xp home or Pro

Vista 32 (NOT MEDIA CENTER versions)

Things you don't want:

Ricoh or ENE combo chip sets

(They are a shared chip that is both PCMCIA and firewire and sometime also express slot.)

Shared video graphics

XP 64 or Vista 64

> Also, how are you guys handling internal & external laptop drives?

> Firewire? USB? E-Sata?

If you are using a firewire interface then you will need to use E-Sata (use a express 34 E-Sata card) or USB 2.0

Depending on what you are requiring the laptop to do the USB 2.0 drive will be fine for most needs.

ICY Dock makes a really cool external enclosure that is USB 2.0 /E-Sata that you can put a normal desktop Sata drive in.

So, they have no human frailties and would never, ever do something wrong or hide something in the name of the cause. Not any of them. Man, that's delusional. Nobody is infallible and everybody has a cause they push if they're willing to get into the spotlight like any of them have.

> Aaron one great American Fredrick Douglas stated that " Aa true patriot

Wise words. Doesn't that apply to other prudent areas of life and in all directions? I constantly question my belief system, my relationships and how I deal with them, my reason for existence. I'm always trying to sharpen the saw. I'm in competition with myself, every day, and it forces me to do things better and look for my own inadequacies. I realize this isn't for everyone, but man I think that's the reason we're here, to learn the important lessons for the next round we face. I don't have desire or time for looking at some dude and saying "he's Race X. Hate him, here's his label." I understand it exists, I just wish we'd evolve as a people above it but humans use visual indicators and body language and it will have to be a concious elevation from all sides to succeed.

Believe it or not it goes both ways and most Whites are TIRED of hearing it too. And being Black doesn't make you a special case. I grew up in many towns, and the racism towards American Indians is also great. But guess what else LaMont - I am of Native American Ancestry. I also am German, so you can't see my Western Cherokee phsically. You might also find it interesting to know that there is racism within the ranks of Cherokee - Western Cherokee is not the same thing. Rather like dark and light skinned black folks. I get an unrestricted view of that racism because I don't look a certain way, and I get the brunt of the Indian's racism for the same reason. And it sucks to see someone play the race card to gain an advantage when things don't go the way they like, or they couldn't earn it on their own merits. I could tell you stories (as I'm sure you could) but I'll spare the bandwidth here. Life would be a lot easier without that chip on the shoulder for some people, but they're going to have to make it disappear by their own choice(s). The best I can do in life is see it, understand it, avoid it and sometimes try to correct it intelligently.

G? Granted, if we made it Paris-only topics at this point, there'd be like two posts per week, but what if we just said: "anything music-related is cool - all other stuff is off-limits", and if someone wants to rant about global cooling they can place ONE post here that simply says something like "I'm ranting about global cooling over on the general group if anyone wants to join in" - ONE post only, no responses allowed on this section.

Whaddyu think?

Anyone in favor?

Your post was incredibly offensive to me, for the following reasons:

"And I find it extraordinarily offensive that you would assume you have the right to cry about injustices done to other people over 150 years ago"

I believe we were lynching black americans right up into the 1950's. I don't think I'm wrong about that.

I believe that black americans were overtly and systematically deprived of their rights as citizens clear through the 1970s and beyond. Look at the legislation enacted and the case law related to access to financing, housing and employment over the past three decades. It's a sad story, not a story of entitlement, but of leveling the playing field.

One of my firmest beliefs is that it's not up to the oppressor to tell the oppressed when it's time to 'get over it'.

Racism is alive and well in America.

is point, I'm speaking in a calm, non-angry manor for the following: Don't assume I'm ignorant or the evil Whitey. You've never met me, and probably have no idea what I even look like, much less the life that surrounds me on a daily basis. You have no idea who my friends are or have been, and no idea what sorts of injustices I may or may not have experienced based on things like skin color. Don't throw daggers, because as I said originally they're double sided.

Having a hero is one thing, however as you already stated about America " Aa true patriot is a lover of his country who rebukes and does not excuse its sins.".. How's that not apply to American Citizens/Heros/Humans as well... you know like Sharpton, Farrakan, the Black Panthers?

Anyhoo, happy Easter I'm off to color eggs with my 6 yr old

>Chuck, this post is pretty unfair, Dedric original posted something that had nothing to do with racism. The anonymous poster attacked Dedric and turned the thread in to the blame game on racism. Speaking of the blame game, who are you blaming for lynching in the 50s? You, me and Dedric had nothing to do with lynching, EVER!!!! Next time you say "we", and "opressor", I think you should think about it.

Racism is alive and well in America, because some people are keeping it alive!!!

>Well Chuck, you don't have to worry - I won't be back. This is long, because I don't want to be misunderstood, yet again, for the 12398231987th time (and my last).

It was offensive to me because the poster was using a 150 year old event as a direct basis, and associative experience for his/her personal experience
- you have to be pretty old to have been a slave in the early days of the US. I also find it more than mildly disturbing because it was a bizarre tangent from a single word, with no purpose other than that bring up a volatile topic and ignite controversy. Well done Yah - you got us all to tear into one another. Best use of trolling I've seen in a while.

I just don't see how anyone has the right to claim to be a victim of an event you weren't personally a part of. Now, and this is VERY IMPORTANT, so PLEASE READ CAREFULLY before assuming: being affected by fallout, or extenuating ideals, actions or social prejudices extending FROM that era, such as modern day racism, ethnic, cultural or religious prejudices? YES!

But, bringing up slavery as an excuse about how you lost a job last week, or felt slighted in a restaurant, or take issue with an everyday word, is no better than me (as a Christian) bringing up Rome's imprisonment, torture and killing of Christians as a way to gain sympathy for my beliefs, and that's why I don't (because that would be ridiculous), regardless of how much grief
I take here for my beliefs. And from where I'm sitting, it's been far more than I have the time or energy for anymore.

Now, when people talk about being victimized today in personal situations, that's another issue, but that wasn't the case, and that was not what I was talking about with the comment you quoted out of context.

You guys really need to start reading before you make blatant assumptions about me or other people here. If we weren't a slave, we don't really have the right to claim to be a victim of slavery itself, so we? If one of us lost a job, or were passed over for a promotion, or have been profiled, that's another issue and one we desperately need to address - but not with government, but with people, personal perceptions, and a determination to stop thinking in terms of prejudice, but start acting with no prejudice.

How about you Chuck? Are you a minority that has personally suffered the prejudices and injustices from the late 1800's (post slavery) through the 50's? Were you even alive in the 50's? If you aren't a minority, do you really have the right to play this card to make your own point?

It's not fair to assume the pains and trials of others just to make a point on a forum. That's responsible for propagating and keeping racism alive as much as racism itself, and that's what I find sad, and troubling - it isn't helping people actually experiencing racism or prejudice, and it isn't making us more aware of it - it's just igniting more and more resentment on both sides.

Solving racism will only happen when both sides stop seeing skin color, culture and ethnic differences, and start seeing neighbors, friends and people instead. Bringing up the past is only useful as long as it keeps us from repeating it, but at a point it only serves to propagate the issue in areas where it doesn't exist (i.e. with people who are not prejudice - it gets old too hearing that I am lumped into the prejudice pot just for being white - that's also racism, and it too needs to stop if racism is to end completely). We are supposed to learn from history, not use it as a platform for spreading guilt, fear, "feel sorry for me", etc. Prejudice sucks. Racism sucks. Hating other people sucks. There is no value in any of these three. Isn't it time to set the example rather than just talking about it??

If you are a minority, or in my case, a Christian, there are certainly cases of prejudice and imho, we absolutely should bring those to light and find a way to end them. Believe me, I really don't feel welcome here as a Christian, but of course, since I'm not a Muslim or a minority race, it's perfectly acceptable to berate me. And I see this everyday. Of course, I can hide my beliefs, and since not saying anything is easier than changing one's skin color, that's what I'm expected to do. But really, is there any difference?

I have a diverse group of family members, friends, peers, colleagues, etc, and none of them complains about past events as a means to make the world feel sorry them - instead we deal with current issues and struggles that face us, not those of our grandfathers, great grandfathers, etc. I have the deepest respect for them, for their determination, character, integrity and success as a result.

People that really want to make a difference don't wait for the world around them to change - they find a way to change the world around them, but not by beligerence, anger, or hatred, but by bringing people together to understand, comprehend, share both good and bad, and start anew.

I could quote personal stories that are phenomenal testaments of exactly this, but out of respect for those people, I can't and won't. You don't know me from Adam, what color my skin is, or what prejudice I, my friends, family, etc have personally endured or witnessed, and I don't claim that to amount to a hill of beans compared to what people endure in other parts of the world.

You just proved my point on associating someone else's struggles Chuck, and I'll bet you've never even seen the inside of prejudice yourself - few of us really know what it's like, and those that do, act like they want to own it as a personal matter of pride, that no one else can help carry - that's also sad, because you might find a heck of a lot of support and encouragement by just letting it go, and opening up a bit, even here on a silly newsgroup.

I feel sorry for those that really do experience it and have that belittled by people who only use it to grandstand their opinions. Maybe this NG should take a trip to the Sudan and see what real prejudice is all about. To be honest, I'm embarrassed for all of us, at how poorly we have come to understand one another and how quickly we are to pull the trigger on vitriolous comments and responses, to hide behind false names, and to use someone else's pain as a debating point.

It would have been far better, if some had posted personal experiences, trials, struggles, etc, and let us unite as a community of audio and music people to encourage, support, and if at all possible, change that situation, to the best of our ability. Instead, through the anonymity of text, we debate issues usually out of our control, or at least we don't let on enough for anyone to know if you are personally experiencing that pain, struggle, etc.

Sharing opinions is great, but is that really what this has come to now?

We all stay so generic that there is nothing but emotionally charged banter to what we say, and it becomes impossible to associate the person with the pain behind the rant.

Sad that it's come to this since there are some truly fantastic people here and the diversity of opinions and experiences is what made it fun to discuss, learn, grow, encourage, etc, even if it was supposed to just be about Paris.

Good luck to you all, and my apologies for inciting this thread to continue, for sharing my beliefs and opinions.

Understood. It is unlikely that it would have been thrown in a post about Error 7/7 however or how Macs suck and the suckage of Macs is much more appropriate to this forum.

If we can argue about Macs, I'll never start another political thread here.

Ducking for cover.....

;DThanks Neil and Dedric for you responses and advice...

Maybe I'll give the Cubase another look... but not this LE version...

Thanks again...

Yeah yeah yeah.... Macs suck!Hey Mon, I and I can not use the word "oppressor" except in a reggae tune, like when Jimmie Cliff say:

"De oppressor is try'n to keep me down, try'n to drive me underground"

Then it be irie. Purely irie.

JohnDedric, I hope you and Nappy both come back when things settle down again, if not sooner.

It's just a product forum, but it's become special because of all the people here. You will be missed.

This NG has been apart of my life for the last 9 and a half years.
I remember when my son was born 9 years ago,I shared that with this group. I remember when Dedric's children were born and Chucks. When Rich discovered he had Distonia(spelling?) I remember marriages and divorces fingers getting chopped off..the old fri nite chats and so much more. I shared my medical problems and recieved great support here. To all I owe a great thanks.
I can't leave without a fight. So if you all can post about Music that moves you,maybe we can get back on the right track. Please check my post on that subject,and let us know what makes you tick. remember,You can't love anything you don't understand.,

respect

Nappy

PS I was in you neck of the woods today and thought of looking you DC.

I really dig his style of scatting.

Hmmm.....just thinking about this Opteron 185. I guess it's not really so little after all. 2 x 2600MHZ cores. That's 5.2 GHZ of CPU on an extremely efficient chipset.....and the mobo is one that is being used with Paris rigs as well-the Gigabyte GA K8NS Ultra 939.

Well, anyway.....back to the lab....

I figured you would like him. He is one of many artist that died to early.

You know,car runs off the road after a gig killing him and a few band members.

He was 33. He's from DC and was in a group with Marvin Gaye called the Rainbows.

Billy has a few LP's of Jazz standards one titled "Unbelievable" on Chess records.

He does Foggy Day ,Old Man as well as Summertime. His song "Sitting in the Park" is one of the most covered songs among Reggae artist. Some artist just transcend time,Billy is one of them. I feel the same way when I hear Coltrane or see a Van Gough. A true original. Thanks for checking him out!

Well,

I got it working. 3ms latency (128k) buffers is possible with large = track counts but I'm just not comfortable with the flanging at this = latency fo vocal work. If I could go to 64k it would be marginally =

That a true zero latency situation.

I'm thinking that until 32k buffers become commonplace, I'll be sticking =

GrahamHey Greg, check this out.

I did some back and forth emails with her last year in Jul07. She had a system for sale but after I quiz'd her about some defects in the photos and lack of an EDS photo (she never got back to me concerning the EDS card) I moved on and bought a full system off the forsale site from Randy Brown. I'm not dissing her, I don't know her. I do feel as though she didn't communicate well with me. It is possible she's a busy person, I don't know. I didn't get a real solid feel for her. Attached are the photos she sent me.

Here it is our back and forth Jul 07:

Hi all,
After 2 years of not really using my Paris system, I think it's time for it to go to a new home where it will be loved and looked after properly. :-)

It's a Paris III system of Ensoniq vintage, MEC rack with 1x analogue 8-input card and 1x 8-output analog card, and the usual honking great PCI card. There's also a black Control-16. I'll be listing it on eBay in the next few days, but if anyone wants to jump in first and make me an offer, email me at sarah@findatlantis.com and we can sort something out. I'd rather sell it within the Paris community if I can. Everything is in very good condition, and I'll shortly (I'm photographing stuff this afternoon) be able to send you photos of the actual equipment.
Best regards,
Sarah Thompson

Hi Wayne,

Sorry, I haven't checked the forum in a while. Yes, it's still all for sale. I thought I had a buyer, but he bugged out at the last moment with a not-very-plausible excuse after wasting a couple of weeks. I'll send you photos in a separate email shortly (I'll have to dig them out).

Wayne: Send me photos.

Sarah: On their way shortly.

Wayne: It sounds like the perfect clone to my system and would be a great back up for me and/or expansion. All black components, right? Not the newer metallic blue "Pro" system, right? Everything works, right?

Sarah: All working, all black.

Wayne: What are you trying to get, price wise?

Sarah: I'd be happy with $500 + shipping. I'll be sad to see it go, but to be honest I've not really done much with it for about 2 years now because my current obsession seems to be photography rather than music. It's never been really heavily used since I've had it, so everything is in good condition, just maybe a racking scratch or two on the MEC rack. You can see from the photos that it's never been bashed about or abused.

Wayne: I'm in Vegas. What state are you in? . . . for shipping consideration.

Sarah: I am in California (Boulder Creek, near Santa Cruz). Shipping shouldn't be a problem because I have an apartment half-full of boxes and packing material after having moved about two weeks ago. I can do UPS pretty easily because there is a dropoff on my way in to work. If you need an exact shipping quote, I can parcel everything up and weigh it if you like.
Sarah

Sarah: I have everything you need -- I never actually bought it myself I'm afraid. All of the rest is fine though. (photos coming shortly -- sorry for the delay, I just got hit by a pile of urgent to-dos, but I'm back on it now)

Hi Sarah,
The condition of the MEC and C16 looks good, however, the main section of the MEC is missing all the lights, ie, pwr, sync, sample rate, etc. It should have yellow, red and green lights in every hole. Any idea what's up?
Wayne

Sarah: I think they are just recessed slightly so they were in shadow in the photo. I will open up the panel to make sure there is nothing amiss if you like. They certainly aren't missing (i.e. they all worked last time I used it!) but it's probably worth checking out in case something has come loose internally. I doubt that, though -- there certainly aren't any rattles.

Wayne: Do you have a pic of the EDS card? It's the card that is inside the computer that's critical to running Paris. I'm OK with no v3.0 CD.

Sarah: I haven't photographed it yet -- currently it's still in the PC. I can do it tonight.

Hi Sarah,
I've purchased a complete system with multiple EDS cards so I won't be needing your system. I never received a response on the MEC lights or a photo of your EDS cards. Keep your system posted on the newsgroup but be prepared to answer those two issues. Good luck. Wayne

The context of my life. Long story. Come on out, bring your Chick Corea stories and some beer and we'll discuss it.

I think the idea of keeping the OT stuff in general is wonderful and we should enforce that.

But the more important issue is that we have all become a part of each other's lives. Like it or not, and no matter how mad we get at each other, we do care what this bunch of crackpots think and we mostly like each other. Despite some real differences in outlook and basic worldview, there is not a single person here I have not learned something worthwhile from.

Can we please calm down a bit?

I would also like to suggest that any damn post by some anonymous troll be given no weight at all, no matter how incendiary. If they will not ID themselves, consider it tagging and let it go.

DCNow there's somebody I can relate to!

No, no and no. I get your point. I was late to the party (thread). I was stirring the pot.

The only prejudice and injustice that I have ever experienced is by virtue of growing up a criminally underweight, oddball, piano playing, non-sports oriented computer geek beatle fan. I have to say that hasn't been all that bad.

So, I apologize.

ChuckHI Don,

We recommend ESet Nod32 and their new Smart Security.

www.eset.com

It's the only one I've used that I can keep on while recording and editing and have it not screw stuff up.

The Copyright Alliance - a non-profit, non-partisan educational organization dedicated to the value of copyright as an agent for creativity, jobs and growth - is doing a short study on how artists and creators view copyright laws and issues, whether or not they find them important, and how likely they would be involved in an organization that works on behalf of creators to protect copyrights. Artists and creators of all types - singers, songwriters, visual artists, writers, actors, web developers, software designers, etc. - are encouraged to fill this survey out.

The survey should only take 3-5 minutes.

NOD32 is recommended for least BTW that new MOTU 828 has essentially a 32 channel mixer with effects in it. I have had pretty OK experiences with the old 828. It ain't top drawer but their stuff works OK.

I'm starting to get my head around this finally (thanks John and =

Ok I got the deal with adding FX to a cue mix using the control room = function. You add the FX channel, then right above it you enable it for = the control room, then add it as a send for whatever channels as you = normally would. Works great. I can still hear a tiny it of latency at = 3ms (128k buffers) but once you mix in a little reverb, it is no longer = noticable. My rig it cruising along at about 30-40%=20 CPU use with 20 tracks playing back and 4 tracks record enabled. I've = got the plugin latency constrained to 3ms and this is working just fine. =
 I really didn't expect that I'd like this control room function nearly = as much as I do. I've got a feeling that I'm going to be using it = exclusively from now on.

What's really interesting is that the RME ADI 8-DS line outputs are so = hot at +4/unity that I can just plug one of these:

http://www.amazon.com/HOSA-STEREO-PHONE-1-TIP-1-RING/dp/B00006805D/ref=3D=sr_1_8?ie=3DUTF8&s=3Delectronics&qid=3D1206331353&am p;sr=3D1-8 into a stereo pair of outputs and plug a set cans into it (even older = AKG 240 600 ohm cans) and there is plenty of drive to get a nice = headphone mix without a dedicated headphone amp if there's no loud = source in the tracking area. Of course, once I get a drum kit involved, = I might need one, but if I use 24 ohm Sony MDR-V900 cans, I might not.

Anyone recommend a high quality headphone amp with 4 outputs?

Any further tracking would be dubbing maybe 1 or two tracks while playing back the prerecorded tracks. this also looks pretty simple if I'm not using a heavy load of UAD-1 plugins. If I were to use them, I can disable them all for dubs in the UA control panel.

I'm slamming the PCI bus with 9 devices (4 x UAD-1's, 2 POCO's and 3 RME HDSP cards) during mixdown cramming enough bandwidth through the bus to choke an elephant and the NForce chipset just shrugs it off. I can playback 40 tracks with a 90% UAD-1 DSP usage, a 90% POCO usage on two cards and a respectable number of native plugins at 1024 buffers when I'm mixing with no dropouts.

The main issue has always been NNTP support. A lot of the group's participants prefer NNTP as their access method, and there's very little out there which supports both web and NNTP. Plus we own the license to this already.

Within reason I can moderate, edit, etc as it is. It's probably more painful to do it on here than some new GUI, and normally I don't see a need. It might be time to get a little more solid on the "Politics/Religion goes in General" rule, but, in theory, it's only a single command line to move a thread between groups anyhow.

While I obviously very much prefer people to be open about who they are rather than "trolling", I'm not sure the extent to which we'd really want to make it hard for people to access the forum either. There are plenty of forums which work well with logons though, but I'd at very least want to take a vote amongst the group.

Unfortunately this forum doesn't have a poll feature. ;o)

I would feel guilty knowing you put any more of your time into "controlling" the NG. Let's make this a self-moderating group.

In another thread I posted Ron Hubbard's Two Rules for Happy Living which would be helpful for self-moderating. :

- 1) Be able to experience anything.
- 2) Create only those effects others can experience easily.

Let us take responsibility for our selves - we're not children.

picking up his instrument.

<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=iCaPno7QChY>

First time I saw George was in LA at the old Coconut Grove, an old style supper club, with Al Jarreau opening. In the middle of GB's set he played Summertime and "someone" started singing. I figured it was Al, but he was nowhere to be seen. I finally realized it was GB. He had a mic in front of him all night for talking to the audience. Blew me away twice. In reading some liner notes I learned he sang professionally, as a guy, before he became (IMHO) the world's greatest guitar player.

Who cares if our soldiers die, just as long as the press has the freedom to have an agenda? If the press and populace can't say what they think, is there any America left that is worth fighting for? And don't forget, the US press beat the war drums mercilessly during the run up and first year or two of the Iraq invasion, if they've turned against it now it only shows how craven they are.

Reporting troop movements or other information that directly endangers the lives of soldiers is, and should be, prohibited, but after that the press can, and should, report whatever they think is accurate.

Speaking of the press and an agenda, what do you think about liberal firebrand Robert Novak outing an active CIA case officer working the anti-proliferation beat?

I would however add a 100 Ohm, 50W ceramic power resistor to each + output to current limit the signal to the cans. This will also allow you to load more cans on one line. If you want a stand-alone multi-channel HP amp, I just picked up a Presonus HP-60 for the location rig that seems to work pretty well. It is good sounding and has some nice features.

<http://www.presonus.com/products/Detail.aspx?ProductId=6>

The only caveat for this unit (and many others) is the stated 60 Ohm minimum. The output at 600 Ohms is OK, but not much headroom left.

I would go the amp route myself...

. I hear a very tiny bit of phasing at 3ms latency but it's my critical listening and when I switch between ASIO direct monitoring and the control room function in Cubase I don't hear anything overwhelmingly negative....just a difference. Once I route the cue mix to one of my outboard reverbs and add just a touch when tracking the problem is solved anyway. The Quantec seems to be the reverb of choice for vocalists to hear in their cans when tracking and due to it's AES I/O only, it's a PITA to use with the Furman system anyway.

If I'm in the initial tracking stages of a project and am just tracking a few performers without a heavy playback load, my system is capable of working efficiently at 64k buffers (1.5) ms and there is really no audible latency at all to my ears. And I could always bounce a mix to stereo and import it to a new project for final critical vocal OD's if I needed to dub a large playback count at 64k buffers. Eventually, I'll get myself a quad core moose of a computer and this wouldn't be as much of an issue anyway.

I'm liking the options that Cubase control room has made available. The functionalities would eliminate a lot of the hardware I have here for workarounds that provide something similar to console routing/monitoring that, as nice as it is and as big a "wow" factor as it provides, it's a lot to deal with since it's not all integrated into a single mixer. I'm considering selling the large Furman system and some of the ancillary pieces that I have here. I don't think I will need them and I think I can preserve the level of cue mix fidelity I have now with a much simplified setup.

I have found that the RME ADI 8-DS D/A converters have adequate drive at +4/unity and that it may simplify things to provide the performer, on station, with their own attenuation capabilities as well as gain, depending on the type of cans they are using. I just did an experiment interfacing one of these:

<http://www.amazon.com/HOSA-STEREO-PH...6331353&sr=1-8> to the outputs of a pair of D/A's, plugging in a 25' long TRS cable to reach the tracking area and interfacing it with one of these that I had here:

http://www.bhphotovideo.com/c/produ...l_Monitor.html

I was surprised that the fidelity was comprable to the HRM-16 if the unit was not driven to extremes (the HRM-16 isn't exactly pristine when driven too hard either, though it does have a little bit more headroom)

Adding one of these to each of the four studio channel cue outputs would allow 4 separate cue mixes or 8 x performers to share 4 x stations in a way similar to the HDS-16/HRM-16 cue system. It would certainly simplify things around here and drastically reduce the cable clutter quotient.

DeejDude, you SO need a console... :-)

Funny, Les Paul had a setup with his wife Mary Ford for her to do vocal overdubs from the kitchen in their house (supposedly).

My wife was the first one to complain about this years ago. she doesn't want mix, she wants to play her guitar and sing. I spend around $2k to put together a system that allows the performers to engineer themselves and they don't appreciate it?????.....WTF is that all about?

>As I understand it, the stop on true low latency is because the OSes have too much extra stuff running. Why not write/port one like Reaper for Linux? Wouldn't that be a solution? Would there be a problem getting all the VST plugs to work? and of course drivers? But surely a few companies would write drivers if there appeared to be a potential market. There are a couple different linux daws. Ardour is the big one I think. The setup and configuration is not for the faint of heart. The OS needs to be tweaked up a lot for low latency audio.

The lack of audio hardware drivers and linux specific plugin versions are big drawbacks.

If someone did an audio only linux distro on a click and run ISO image that was all tricked out and ready to go it would be pretty cool. Maybe its out there.

I've tried it a few times, it doesn't get done what I need. VST support goes back and forth as it's hard to get such stridently non-free software working with free apps. The plug-in companies won't offer any support. That said, I do know one guy who uses Ardour for his vocal overdubs at home.

The linux kernel (when properly configured) can be a SPECTACULAR low latency system. The issue is hardware/software support.

We're waiting to see exactly what's changed and what hasn't. We do know that XP SP3 will replace XP's printing subsystem with Vista's.

Based on all of the printing bugs we've seen on Vista, this might stop existing print drivers from functioning.

I'll post more when I know more!

d, zero latency and hardware-like response of Paris, and will no doubt have myriad newbie PC configuration questions soon enough.

But I thought I'd chime in. In case this isn't yet public knowledge here
- rejoice, for a Linux DAW has come!

Well, sorta. Kinda. Okay, not really.

However, the formidable REAPER, which seems to be pretty well known and well-thought-of here - while not actually ported to Linux - is apparently now running quite well under Linux using WINE, a compatibility layer of substitutes for Windows APIs (as far as I understand it), and WINEAsio drivers.

It seems a tad geeky to configure and get running, but reportedly once configured, REAPER (along I believe with the at-times very good included plugins - and now apparently some Windows VSTs) runs well and with nice low latencies (some reportedly less than 3ms, although I have no idea how rigorously that might have been measured).

Here's a link to a step-by-step "how to" and a lot more info:

<http://www.cockos.com/forum/showthread.php?t=16786&highlight=linux>

As the poster says:

"... The REAPER dev team do a great job of keeping REAPER "Wine friendly". in conjunction with Wine, we use a special ASIO driver, aptly named "WineAsio" which we use within wine to be able to use a true blue windows vst host to use windows-compiled VSTs, and any other great DAW features like midi sequencing, in-house effects etc. There will be more on this as we go through the guide."

"... there will always be an "overhead" when using wine when compared to running it natively. this is because the wine api is running OVER the linux, so while JACK may give you some crazy good latencies, dont expect to be able to function as smoothly as native Windows just yet....for most its just fine though. some of the major issues mostly have to do with the gui (being slower or slightly choppy at times)."

I did a fair bit of audio editing work under Linux last year using a low-latency-kernel distro called DeMuDi put out by the AGNULA project with a lot of bundled apps, just for the sake of trying something new.

Trying it out was was pretty cool, but I had it installed on a very old Pentium so I can't comment much about the more advanced applications. But the algos for things like timestretching and pitch shifting, as well as many other processes, were excellent.

Apparently AGNULA has since lost its EEC funding and Demudi has now been folded into the Debian Multimedia Project, which I don't know much about.

<http://wiki.debian.org/DebianMultimedia>

Hope this info is of interest to someone.

Oh - PS - anyone got any documentation on the Paris session file format? I'd love it if someone got enough info to Justin so he could take a look at being able to import Paris sessions - he did it with RADAR in about two or three days, so with documentation I wonder how hard it could be to do the same with Paris?

In the project window, just select 44.1

GNU/linux options will continue to improve, slowly but surely, as programmers will continue to program. But I don't see anyone pumping a bunch of money into GNU audio software any time soon. Databases, server monitoring, that sort of thing (see Sun finally getting religion on this front) will continue to be where the action is for free software.

play R&B/funk gigs I really have to use my (also sweet) custom strat.
It's no hardship, but I would always prefer to play the Ibanez if possible.

So I got this crazy idea about sticking a single coil in between the humbuckers. Anyone tried this? I've certainly played guitars with this config and from my experience, while it will not replace a Strat, it is useful for getting some lighter tones. Here's what you do:

Get a set of these:

<http://www.wcrguitar.com/crossroads.html> and order them with the 4-conductor wiring. Then, wire the guitar to split the coils on both pickups. You can use a switch to do this, or you can use pull pots in the 2 volume positions.

These are some of the best PU's out there and they split nicely. You get a big tone improvement over the stock PU's, and more of a stratty sound with them split.

Call Jim at WCR if you have any questions. He is a great guy and makes amazing pickups.

There, you just talked yourself out of it. All the more reason not to mutilate something you feel so strongly about.

I would do what Don suggested & get some coil-split humbuckers... still not gonna be exactly a Strat sound, but it'll get you an approximation of it & allow you to not have to experience "router regret" later.

Hah! I received a lifetime achievement award from the Dremel Corp. for this very thing!

DCI do worry about the pain of "router regret"...

Problem is I've tried splitting coils and it has never worked worth a damn. It gives a weak, insipid sound, IMHO.

Maybe i need a Roland VG 99.

Here's one source: http://www.guitarpartsresource.com/covers_adapters.htm

I bought a brand spankin' new 1973 Strat when I was 12 and proceeded to mutilate the body for many years trying various combos of humbuckers, etc. I actually split the back of the body while chiseling (at 12, I didn't realize what a bad idea it was) and had to glue and fill to get it back together. Strangely, the only original part left on that guitar today IS the body. I eventually installed the EMG David Gilmour pickup assembly and it is now one of the best sounding strats I've ever heard.

Router bad, adapter good.

My $.02!

You could wire 'em like a PRS for a useful range of tones that would cover your gigs.

You know you want it. :^) Let us know what you think when you get one!

I don't expect service will go offline, but...

Just a quick note to let you know that I plan to participate in Earth hour, hence I'm just going to turn power off at the mains for an hour tomorrow, which will be from 10AM until 11AM GMT (on Saturday 28th GMT). Basically it's just under 34 hours from this post date.

I'll sideline some rules and leave the UPS running the server and internet through this time. Previous experience indicates that the UPS should last out the hour without issues, so we should see no service interruption to the group. In any case it is a good opportunity to test the UPS and give the batteries a bit of a cycle under monitored conditions.

As per usual, if anybody wishes to argue the political or environmental merits of Earth hour please do so in General. This is here only to advise the group of the possibility of an outage.

Cheers,
Kim.Yeah, I got yer Earth Hour right ovah heah bub!

<grin>

thanks Kim for all you do!

>Kim.I have a PRS for which I came up with a trick circuit for pickups with all four conductors available - mine are made by Tom Holmes. I have a regular 3 position PU selector and a 4 pole/double throw mini switch. W/ the mini switch in one position I have a normal 2 humbucking guitar. Flip the switch and the treble position becomes the outside coils in series, the bass position becomes the inside coils in parallel (PRS calls this "Parallel Strat") and the middle position combines those two hybrid pickups. The series outside sound is my all time favorite - it has the power of a humbucking PU w/ the bright, round sound of both pickups. If you're interested I'll find my scan of the schematic and post it. I'd probably suggest having an experienced guitar tech do the wiring because it can be a pain getting the wires straight so it works as I described.

(again, use a push/pull pot here) and then blend the 2 pickups together, assuming they each have a volume knob. If not, you could rewire/tap/switch in some manor, or if you're really feeling industrious you could even buy/build some electronic circuits to do what you need, on demand. I'm not sure I'm being clear enough due to text limitations, let me know if that's the case.

Current project I'm recording - thought I'd post the kit setup & signal chain in case anyone's in the mood for a drum tracking thread. Pic attached, and here's a short clip of what it sounds like in the room:

<http://saqqararecords.com/MiscAudio/DrumkitSampleA.mp3>

Kick & snare have some comp & EQ, everything else is the un-tweaked track.
