Found out something interesting when looking at Leopard at CompUSA last week - Spaces does eat RAM for every instance - it's a cool idea, but for all but average users, it's just like loading multiple apps - just cleaner (which would be great for my wife who likes to keep 10 apps open on a Mac with only 768M of RAM....sigh.... probably one reason the poor beast is headed out to pasture).

Dedric

Scroll down through the thread. Looks nice - maybe a bit wider than a Mackie Control, but not as deep - price seems decent, unless you have to buy Eucon as well ($2k extra). It would fit really well with my setup. Might have to relegate the Mackie control to an edit suite. ;-) happening in the real world - the one not influenced by the ads and hype.

Apple holding the reigns of core audio bothers me a little, but it's really no worse than Microsoft holding the reigns of whether an application can actually function under its' OS. Apple is strong with Final Cut, so I'm not any more worried about their committment to audio than I am about Digi pirating the native realm to put everyone else out of business (okay, that last part is more of a concern at the moment).

As far as actual speed for audio, XP appears to be a little faster than either Leopard or Vista. May not be enough to matter to most, but in terms of the Apple ads, well, marketing by most companies is just an attempt to convince buyers of their version of the truth, regardless of the actual facts. :-) That said, Vista and Leopard are more extensive OSs than XP, so a little droop in higher demand performance tests is to be expected running a recovery app to reclaim my critical data after Norton missed a boot sector virus that hosed my system drive on my office machine. Thank God that this application (called Recover My Files) has found the data on the hosed drive. I've loaded a clean install of Win XP on a brand new 160G drive and I think I'll be able to recover what I need off the old one, but I've had it with Norton. It's bloated and uses lots of system resources and now I don't trust Norton to catch any virii that might be infesting the files I'm recovering that will be loaded on to the new system. I can't even get Ghost to recognize the new drive in order to recover a backup drive image I had which was relatively recent.....and I don't want to use that drive image anyway because it probably is infested with bugs.

I'm typing this from my other office machine that is protected by PC-cillin which seems to work OK. I want to protect this new system in a very serious way. I don't want to have to deal with this crap again. What do you guys recommmend?

supposed to be good.

Nothing is perfect in Virusland of course, but Grisoft is free (for some uses), it's not bloated, it's stable, and while early on it used to miss things, I don't think I've seen it miss a virus for a couple of years, not that I get a lot of viruses near my system, but it's been good.

On a DAW I usually consider it more important to ensure system stability than protect against viruses. Virus protection on a DAW is best done by quarantine.
Just make sure that it's not on the net and that any media you put on it has the extension "WAV" and you'll be right. ;o)

But you have nothing to lose by loading Grisoft AVG and trying it out, as it is free after all.

Cheers,
Kim.

I've just posted my shinny, new multiband compressor for PARIS. It's a combo of the X-Over and the PARIS Compressor, stitched together is EDS assembler for your mixing and mastering pleasure. I wish I'd had this thing for the last 10 years when dealing with boomy acoustic guitars.

As always, you can download it at www.ensoniq.ca. Just scroll down to the bottom of the page.

Please let me know what you think of this one. I'm dying to hear how/if these plugins are being used.

Vista has a reworked command interpreter that is supposedly more full featured. Closer to a *nix shell like bash. I haven't done much with it because Vista is, in my opinion, everything ghastly about M$oft and everything ghastly about Apple rolled into one ghastly operating system. But I'll have to deal with it at some point. Maybe the shell will be a tiny silver lining in that otherwise very dark cloud.

Excellent looking controllers - the controller has 4 faders with switches/knobs for each channel, as well as others, a touch screen, jog wheel surrounded by buttons. Also an 8-fader unit as well for expansion. Very nice looking units. Looking forward to the release in January.

I've been looking at the HEDD 192 unit. But, I must admit, you can get similar results with just using Paris as a summing mixer.
