I am totally onboard the whole 15000 virtual synths thing, but the other day I started just sticking a mono mic up in front of my piano, my amp and my face and it sounded good too, except for the face part.

Heh Yes I don't think you need any hand holding from me. Well Ok if you wanna hold hands we can. We can spoon if you want.

Liquid cooling? Are you over clocking it? Kinda over kill for such a low voltage low heat chip if you ain't over clocking it.

Make sure want ever OS backup software you use actually works right when backing up and restoring. The ICH10 chip set doesn't have allot of support yet. Do not use AHCI as a a controller mode it will cause issue

All reverbs you have ported are exceptional!

DimitriosHi Mike,

I agree with Dimitrios. Your Drum and Vocal Plates have become my go to ever since I bought them. The standard Paris Plate has been lost in the shuffle now. An equal quality room would be a nice addition if you find the time.

If I keep on spending this much time messing around I might get a Fuji 690 for when I want a _real_ big ass negative. But that Yashica must be fun.

The film world sure has changed a lot as well. I'm running through a bunch of negative options to see what I like. So far plain ol' Fujicolor is leading the way for color and the Ilford color process B&W just for kicks. I'm going to run some slllloooooowwww Tri-x through it soon to remind myself what diehard B&W looks like.

I also have a Nikon D300 that is a mind blowing camera. Photography is a lot like audio to me, the digital stuff is incredible and I'm happy to exploit all of its wonderful goodness. But I also like the old school stuff because it has a real different flavor.

Can you tell I'm a plate a hall guy?

I've literally spent the last 3 months doing nothing but work on the PSCL.
I've been toying with rewriting using objects. We'll see.

I'll take a look at the algos tonight.

All the best,

Mike

Thanks!Hi All,

Here is the latest/greatest PSCL. I am not aware of any problems with it.
