for these things... even a slight difference in diameter can ruin your day with punch blocks. This means you can't use just any wire. There is a guy over on GS that built a room and used them:

<http://www.gearslutz.com/board/high-end/48460-steves-new-recording-studio-start-18.html>

Start reading the thread about mid-way down the page. He had quite a bit to say about the blocks and wire.

I don't like them personally... something frightens me about insulation displacement connections...

David.

Use the E3 connector rather than the punchdown. You can do it all with their crimp tool, but we crimp and then solder. Great gear, easily programmable for normalling on the front panel and with the E3, easily changed on the back. We have had zero service calls on these.

I can get you a good price once you get your part number.

Man, I'd love to dig in to your set up, but I must admit I am not that intrepid,
I'm afraid to touch my working system.

What also bothers me about the online music thing, as well as the online video thing, is that we are developing an entire generation of consumers who accept 128k mp3's as hi-fidelity. Same thing with online video and most dvd's. Unreasonable mpeg compression, chunky artifacts, sections of background that drag along and just jump....

And yet all I hear at the local Best Buy is people raving about the image on the new hi-def tv's when compression artifacts are plainly visible.

They're just all being trained to accept crappy, super-high-compression content as "pure digital quality."

Gives a really bad name to digital.

pab, curmudgeon-in-training.This is still new but so far so good. More tweaks may be coming as I learn more.

ect the Advanced tab of the Systems applet and then select the Performance settings button. Then select the Advanced page. In here it is possible to customise the Virtual Memory. For custom size, this is often recommended to be 1.5 to 2 times the amount of your total RAM for both initial and maximum size. Set this to a fixed minimum and maximum value according to your existing RAM

#Speed Up Menus (I use powertoys to speed up menus)

You can use this tip to speed up the Start Menu in Windows XP. You can customize the speed of the Start Menu by editing a Registry Key. Click Start, and then click Run. Type Regedit in the box, and then click OK. Expand the menu in the left panel and select the HKEY_CURRENT_USER\Control Panel\Desktop folder. Scroll down in the right panel and double click on the MenuShowDelay file. In the Value Data box, change to default value for the menu speed from 400 to a lesser number, such as 1. Click OK.

#Disable Internet Synchronise Time

#Disable Automatic Desktop Cleanup Wizard

Start > Settings > Control Panel > Display > Desktop > Customise Desktop > Untick "Run Desktop Cleanup Wizard every 60 days"

#Disable Notification Area Balloon Tips

Click Start , click Run , type regedit , and then press ENTER.
HKEY_CURRENT_USER\Software\Microsoft\Windows\CurrentVersion\Explorer\Advanced Right-click the right pane, create a new DWORD value, and then name it EnableBalloonTips . Double-click this new entry, and then give it a hexadecimal value of 0 . Quit Registry Editor. Log off Windows, and then log back on.

#Disable Offline Files (is off by default)

Start > Settings > Control Panel > Folder Options > Offline Files > Untick "Enable Offline Files"

#Disable CDROM Autoplay

Start > Run > Regedit

HKEY_LOCAL_MACHINE\System\CurrentControlSet\Services\Cdrom

Set autorun to 0.

Open My Computer Right Click on each CDROM and choose Properties Click on the Auto Play tab In the drop down box you can choose the Action for each choice shown in the drop down box

Go to Start->Run->gpedit.msc Computer Config -> Administrative Template -> System -> Double click Turn off Autoplay Enable it.

#Disable Disc Indexing

Indexing Service is a service that extracts the information from a set of documents and organizes it in a way that makes it quick and easy to access that information through the Windows XP Search function, the Indexing Service query form, or a Web browser.

This information can include text from within a document, (its contents), and the characteristics and parameters of the document, (its properties), such as the author's name. Once the index is created, you can search, or query the index for documents that contain key words, phrases, or properties.

#Remove Messenger

Messenger starts up at the windows load up but we can get rid of that in no time at all..

Start Menu>Run

Type this in exactly as it is here:

RunDll32 advpack.dll,LaunchINFSection %windir%\INF\msmsgs.inf,BLC.Remove Hit Enter...you will see a DOS-like shell appear and disappear very quickly and then it will ask you to restart.

#Classic Start Menu

Right-click the Start button, and then click Properties. Click Classic Start menu. Click the Customize button to select items to display on the Start menu. By default, selecting the Classic Start menu also adds the My Documents, My Computer, My Network Places, and Internet Explorer icons to your desktop.

#Disable background applications - Background applications start up when your computer starts up and can use up unnecessary resources. To prevent

Click on the "startup tab" and disable (uncheck) programs such as "taskmon", "load power profile", "real player", "office startup", "winamp agent" and so on. Keep programs like "scan registry", "system tray" and programs relating to interfacing with your audio card (such as console software to control its features).

I also would be hard pressed to consider anything outside of Dreamweaver and Flash for web development - integration with Illustrator, Photoshop, etc. is excellent.

As far as Premiere, imho, it's hard to beat Final Cut at this point. Adobe wavered there and gave up a jump on the NLE market before they really won a stake in it vs. the Avid tradition.

I know film/video studios considering having Premiere on hand (now that it's returning Mac) just for compatibility with Premiere editors, but FC rules the non-Avid market, and is making a big dent in the Avid market, or so it seems.

>Well, last night was our 5th concert with Jim Peterik and friends.

Concert went fantastic. Some immense tech glitches during soundcheck, but we all pulled together and got through 'em.

How immense?

Let's just say there's another kid at the theatre who's been doing some sound stuff recently, and not been telling me about it.

Things like rearranging all my gear, deciding which we need to keep and which we don't, and then taking that stuff home and denying that he's ever seen it. Until the chairwoman called, and then it's "Yeah, we have that. We were just sorting through it and will bring it right back down."

Right. And we're still missing stuff.

My main amp rack at the theatre consists of two Crown Microtech 1200's for monitors, and three bridged Behringer EP2500's for FOH. All wired through a dbx DriverackPA controller, and custom input/output patch panels on the back. Has been that way for three years.

So, I go down on Friday night to go through my cables and stuff to see what's missing. Had to make up 4 new mic cables to replace ones that went "missing". Had to replace a speakon on one main monitor cable because he decided he needed it for something else.

Annoying, but not a deal breaker.

They decided to put a matinee of the current play on Sunday right before my concert. Stupid power plays and politics (how long can it take you to set up a concert? It's just a couple of mics and guitars, right???) so I don't get my usual whole day to set up and troubleshoot before the artist arrives at 4pm. I get to start setting up an entire stage at 4:40. Nice.

So, we get the mics set up, get the cables run, run the drive snake from the monitor board to the back of the amp rack. So far, so good.

Then I open the front door of the rack and notice a huge, gaping hole where my two Crowns should be.

What the F&*K????????????????

So, I run back upstairs, and find the two crowns stacked up on the floor in the storage room.

So my helper and I run back downstairs, toss 'em in the rack, and try to patch them back in. Meanwhile, I'm swearing up a storm and threatening to drive to someone's house and kill them.

Now, this is a permanent install, mind you. These amps have been there for three years. They are not needed anywhere else. I know they pulled them to use for sound for our annual fundraising banquet, which I refused to do this year (9 years of being treated like shit and yelled at by control freaks with no clue about sound.... I'd had enough.) But the thing is, there was no reason to pull those amps.

I built a portable amp rack on wheels specifically for the banquet. Has a FOH amp, a monitor amp, Behringer DCX2496 crossover/controller, and a couple of GEQ's with front-mounted custom I/O panels. I showed him the damn rack. Explained the damn rack. They didn't use the damn rack.

The thing is, the theatre people there last night were saying it was my fault for not checking on it earlier in the day. Like when they had a fucking play going on. Nobody blames the idiot who pulled the damn amps and then didn't have the fucking courtesy to reinstall them.

If I had pulled a major piece of equipment, told no one, and then didn't put it back right before one of their plays opened, they would have crucified me. Yet, all of this is my fault, not the idiot stoner kid's.

This is why I've decided to walk away from those people after 26 years. And my friends and I are forming a production company to continue the acoustic concerts at other venues.

Fortunately, Jim, Larry Millas, and company are good friends, know I'm not an incompetent fool, and also know the problems I've been having with the group. So, we sucked it up, soldiered on, and got the show underway only 15 minutes late. And once we got it dialed in, the PA just sang, and the show just plain rocked.

Anyhow, enough bitching. Onto the recording stuff.

I've been multitracking these shows into Paris since the beginning 6 years ago. Gives me good source material when I play engineer later on.

The last couple of years, though, we've also been recording the show straight to cd and selling it to the audience at the end of the show. Been taking the feed from the FOH insert. As you know, that never sounds good in-your-face on a cd.

It occurred to me that I could mix in Paris at the same time I'm tracking. Duh. Hadn't thought of that before....

My cd guy has a dual cd-recorder rig being fed by an Alesis 6-channel a/d converter with lightpipe inputs.

This is why I was trying to figure out how to use the adat card just on output and use the two 8in's on inputs.

I ran a cable over to his position, gave him a C16, turned the monitor so he could see the mini-mixer up on the screen, and fed his rig from lightpipe channels 1&2.

Worked like a charm. This "cd-now" cd is the best-sounding one we've ever done. Giving the recording engineer control over the mix turns out to be a good thing.....

Then it also came to me that I could toss a couple of EDS verbs on the auxes to add some "room" and strap a limiter across the global fader to make sure we didn't clip the outputs. Yes, I've got two audience mics, but they're facing out from the stage, so they don't work so well as a natural reverb source. Next time, I might try them in the back of the house.

We've been contemplating getting a mixer for the cd guy so he could mix, but this system eliminates the need and accomplishes two recordings from one set of inputs. In fact, there was another guy videotaping the show, and I paralleled the outputs with the MEC outs and fed his camera with the same mix as our cd guy was getting. At least one of those songs will end up on YouTube soon.

I love Paris. And I love the fact that I tracked 16 freakin' tracks for 2 hours straight on a 300MHz G3 Mac with nary a glitch.

This system just rocks. I think I'm going to build a rackmount XP box for the home system for final mixing, but I've had such good luck with reliability in the field with the Macs that I wouldn't use anything else.

pabHi James,

Now that is just plain silly. Apple might have a chance with their Aperture software but only because their name being already established in the desktop publishing market.

my system sounds great. I went ahead and worked out a deal on that Neve 5042 so now it's mine and is a permanent fixture here. I have no complaints. I guess that it's just that having used the Paris system for 9 years, I was so comfortable with certain things about it that I didn't think I'd miss.....like the plate reverbs. I didn't know I liked them that much.
Chucks modulation FX sounded great too and NoLimit???....well, it had something that nothing that I have here had. I'm able to use anything I want nowadays as a channel insert or on an aux and I can create as many busses as I wantand don't have to worry about not being able to patch acorss submixes and the Paris mono delays are just wonderful in a mix. It's easy to take a lot of things for granted I guess.

Would I go back??...I don't think so.....not now. If I had it to do all over again, would I sell the Paris rig and the insane digital routing matrix that was sometimes so confusing and frustrating and full of so many potential clocking disasters, but that I knew so well because I had created it and was familiar with it's quirks???.....I don't think so.....not now.

With the Cubase rig.....I turn it on....it works.

m now monitoring plugs realtime and it is very cool.
I had to lower the buffer to 192 which gave me 5.3ms latency.
If I were to hear clicks and pops while recording in this manner it wouldn't be recording those clicks and pops would it?
It is the plug causing this isn't it? Or is it the CPU crapping out while trying to keep up an the clicks will go to disk?
I havent tested it.
Anyway.. I wasn't getting any noticeable clicks and pops after getting my levels set properly.
Any suggestions or words of wisdom while recording in this manner?

thx

At this point, I'm all about whuppin' some ass.

However, what I'm going to do is make a list of all the equipment they won't be using once I stop doing One Night Jam, make them an offer on it, and see if they'll sell it to me. That will then be the basis that our new group will build our smaller PA around. For larger acts, we'll probably have to rent until we have the cash to buy bigger stuff. We're hoping to find a semi-permanent venue, and the advantages of a permanent installation over the vagaries of rental equipment seems to me to be worth the cost.

The MEC I was using was one that I bought a couple of years ago. Yours will be going, along with the one I just bought from ebay, in my studio rack with the new XP Paris rig. I've got a rackmount case - just need a good mobo/cpu combo and I'm ready to explore what plugins are available in the Windows world. One of the C16's you sent me last year, the one with the funky monitor knob, will be used as the tracking C16 for the road rig. Don't care about the monitor knob then. The one I just bought, with the loose bandwidth knob, will be my second home C16, provided I can reattach the encoder and there's no pcb damage. I've got the second malfunctioning C16 you sent me as well for spare parts, if it looks like I can fix it. Otherwise, it goes off to The.

DCI realize the stats can be misleading, and a good statistician can make them say anything anyway. Nevertheless, there _are_ a lot of fatal gun accidents in this country. Also, I'm the least likely demographic to be a victim of violent crime, I white, male, 6'2", and look a little menacing. So for me, having a gun is probably a bad idea, statistically speaking.

But, it's a good idea in the sense that I can walk safely pretty much wherever I want, which is something any citizen ought to expect as a matter of course. Sadly, in this country we can't. Unfortunately New York State doesn't recognize out or state carry permits, so when I'm in NY

Cubase ain't 64bit yet, but will be in a few months. I can see the = writing on the wall and I want to be able to go there, soooo.....

Here's what I'm looking at:

rough total: $3599.96

At this point I think I would have a workable 10+ GHZ system that = might be able to run at 1.5ms without having to worry about ASIO = direct monitoring while tracking projects that have FX on inserts/sends = and still be able to utilize my existing PCI audio interfacing with PCIe =

PCIe/PCI stuff and I would be 64 bit capable when the time comes and I = want to go to Vista and run 8G of RAM on the DAW.

I really like the RME HDSP configuration I've got now with the Multiface = and the 2 x HDSP 9652's with 16 AD/DA's on the ADI8-DS units and I don't = really want to spend the extra $$ on RME and UAD-1 PCIe hardware if I = can just integrate my existing PCI hardware with the PCIe > PCi SBS = chassis. There might be a small hit to performance with the PCi>PCIe = conversion as compared to interfacing PCIe directly with the mobo, but = the new mobos don't have enough PCIe slots to allow me to use the number =

The reason I'm tempted to make the move now (besides wanting the = GrahamMan....this app is sweet. Works efficiently with quad cores and has configuration options that allow UAD-1's to operate without sucking CPU cycles. this is very major, especially when one of my main issues is being able to operate at low latencies with plugin FX active in a project. I'm hoping a quad CPU will get me there. Midi / VSTi's aren't a huge issue for me right now and I've got a farm system I could use here to just stream the stuff digitally if necessary. Reaper also has some kind of systemlink over LAN situation as well.

0--The only thing I have against Reaper is it has no ability to sync with anything...it can play master but not slave

It's a cool little app and easy to use and like you I think it's routing matrix is excellent!

Can't wait to see what they do with the look when they finally decide to work on that area.

It also reminds me of my favorite DJ app, DJ Decks (www.djdecks.be). Instead of paying big bucks for the NI or Stanto stuff and being locked into their hardware this will work with any ASIO card and an RIAA preamp. Cool skins are available and the developer fixes bugs in days, responds to feature requests in the forums. Pretty cool.

existed and I need to interface:

6 x midi I/O ports on 3 x HDSP 9652's
1 x midi I/O port on a Multiface
1 x midi I/O port on Houston
1 x Midi I/O port on PadKontrol
1 x Midi I/O port on MR Rack
1 midi O port on keyboard controller

For a guy who hates and doesn't use much midi, I've got wayyyy too much of it and I'm sick of crawling around repatching things and when I started looking for options with over 8 x midi I/O there wasn't anything. I was lucky to have found this thing.. It will even merge midi on ports 1 & 2 (whatever TF that means ;o)

some real advantages to Vista as far as performance of multicore CPU's.
Win XP multicore support is more of a kludge, or so I'm hearing (though Vista itself may be a kludge too). The ability to run lots of RAM is always a good thing and if Vista is better at supporting multicore CPU's perhaps it would be preferable to XP-64.

God forbid I should buy a Mac.

>Yeh I'm not sure why you'd want to go Vista DeeJ.

That is why I posted the Linux on a laptop question the other day. If at all possible my Windows career is going to stop on XP. I'll still need at least one XP or 98 install for Paris, but I can run everything else on Linux...

....audio software may be another thing, though I'm confident 2 years from now we'll see movement towards Linux from mainstream audio apps also. Meanwhile, I imagine they will continue to support XP.

XP support will be around a long while, as 98 was. Remember the bad press Windows ME got? And 98 ended up outlasting ME because of this. Now look how much MORE bad press Vista has had.

Windows days are over dude... IMHO... don't go Vista...

Cheers,
Kim.
