-----090207060208010501070202--We aren't going down that road - well Rick can if he wants. ;-)

I'm not holding any hopes for Vista for pro audio. Most PC audio users I know are sticking to XP (which of course can't last forever). Leopard does in fact look like a nice upgrade. The last I heard from Nuendo/Mac users is that the latest rev of Leopard actually improved low latency performance - not sure exactly how much actual performance it would translate to for most users, but it sounded promising for Mac users, or anyone considering a Mac for audio. Since I'll be moving my East West libraries to Play next year (when Symph. Orch is released), and it's been updated for better 64 bit support than most apps, a Mac with 8-16G of Ram is a distinct possibility for me - that's why I keep an eye on threads like this to get an idea of what's Very, very nice.

Also dig the Leslie in the background....

pabl't's gonna round things a bit and "broaden/deepen" your soundstage without you losing the center. Very subtle. Follow it up with Elephant ;o)
