I could pick up an ADI 192-DD for around $1200.00 US. that would leave around $4800 for the three interfaces and the controller.

Simplifying my situation and keeping my current DAW which, quite frankly, is the most stable DAW I've ever used that is friendly with 4 x UAD-1 cards and 2 x POCO's which is more DSP than I

The answer is more communication. Commerce is a form of communication and as such, I think more commerce will inevitably bring about a metamorphose of the Chinese government. I would prefer to see a peaceful evolution rather than a bloody revolution.

Boycotting would get the government hardliners backs up. And realistically, your boycott wouldn't "...amount to a hill of beans in this world." (add Bogart lisp)

I appreciate your desire to change the situation, but I would suggest finding a constructive way to communicate a lot into China, to people, the government, anywhere. Comm is the solution. Tell them about freedom.
Freedom appeals to everybody.

Globalization cuts both ways. We have two groups holding more than a trillion dollars in reserve, the Saudis and the Chinese. If we screw them we screw ourselves. What's more important to you, Tibet or Illinois? That's the hard reality.

We could trade 'em Tiawan.....wait!!!.....that would be like saying saying to a robber whose got you at gunpoint....."OK take my wallet.....but you can't have my pocket change".I'm using PCI and AGP nVidia cards on the Asus A7S333 here.. zero hassles, best the video has ever run in fact. Either way it looks like a very nice interface with a lot of features.
If they bring it in at a reasonable price, it should be a winner.

I believe the MOTU 828mk3 and the MOTU 896HD use standard FireWire ports and are expandable.

Anyways, it will be interesting to see how the Steinberg stuff is. If there claim of no latency is true, that would be great. The Yamaha mic pres are vary good, IMO. I have a feeling the Steinberg stuff is going to be expensive though.

All the new stuff that is coming out is great, but I feel like a dog that is chasing my tail sometimes. I'm cutting back and selling off. I'd like to get off the money tread mill for a while. I have Paris and a few other systems that do what I need. I think I'm going to sit tight for the rest of this year to see where it's all going.

Because of the low cost, I'm considering the Alesis Master control. It won't be out for a while and I want to hear some user reviews and hear how it sounds before I buy. The same for the new Presonus studio stuff. The StudioLive mixer and the Monitor Station both look promising. If the Steinberg stuff is reasonably priced and will work well with other software I may go that way. For now I'm cutting back.

It's a long list, and the US does business with most of them,

Yes, any vst/asio can use the dsp via it's separate mixer(ala total mix and the like). However, In Cubase, it has a direct route into Cubase's mixer and smoothly integrating with COntrol Room..Bypassing the the units own separate mixer.

So, lets see, we have Motu's new unit with onboard dsp, TC's units with dsp, M-audio's new unit, EMU and now Yammy. Is this a trend? Will these type of units get more powerful DSPs? We'll have to wait and see. But, these kinds of units does solve a lot a common DAW problems.
BTW: Yammys plugins (REV-X and their Vinatge Comps and EQS)found on the DM-2000 MII and their Motif XS keyboards are really top notch. So, I guess these will be trickling downward into the VST realm. Nice..

processors chained in series could accomplish this, if need be.....and if I Don't they have a monopoly on the manufacture of RAM Kai Chek? China views Tibet as a serious threat to its national safety, rightly or wrongly. Historically China's primary concern has not been invasion from without but disintegration from within. So while the Tibetans might not have rockets they are being mistreated because China views them as a threat to their security, just like Israel views Gazans as a threat to their security.

I don't think that it's right for rockets to be fired on Israeli citizens. But you agree that a fair number of those killed and maimed in Gaza are non-rocket-firing civilians, yes? Are their lives somehow less valuable than the lives of Tibetans? Or Latvians, or Sudanese, or Burmese? The Burma thing might not get a lot of ink in the west, but it's pretty front and center here.

My point was only that American moral outrage seems to be applied with a fair degree of randomness, or maybe a fair degree of self serving intent. China is a current whipping boy, but I'm old enough to remember when Nicaragua was the beachhead of the red menace in our hemisphere. It just gets old after a while. If someone wants to make the world a better place volunteer or donate to an effective charity, there are plenty of causes that could use some help without a bunch of boycott nonsense.

Don't underestimate us. We can still blow up the earth. I believe he said it was the controller box that's using USB, the other box was using Firewire.

It's really interesting but yet a half year away, as I can see here:

You are correct that both view the threat similarly, but I believe we both would agree Israel has more physical evidence to back their assertion.

The lives of those in Gaza are not less valuable, agreed. However, they are living in an area of active, destructive aggression against their neighbor. It is likely that many of those killed or injured know who the true perpetrators are. They are unable or unwilling to police their own territory and are experiencing the result. If they handed the perpetrators over to Israel or Brought them to justice themselves, it is likely the Israeli response would be much different.

I doubt that would be helped by comparing a large country who is not experiencing attack on their lands with one who experiencing it on a nearly daily basis and considering them equally wrong.

Rightly or wrongly does matter. Don't pass over that issue too quickly.

non-rocket-firing

Who are used as human shields specifically to draw these sorts of false comparisons.

As far as boycotts go, it is far too late for any of that to matter.

Our own thirst for cheap consumer goods put us in the position we are in.

My Furman HDS-16/HRM-16 lets the talent do most of this anyway. Once they get their heads around it (which takes about 5 minutes) each of up to 5 performers can have his/her own custom mix. All I do is set the routing. since Totalmix routes everyting in stereo pairs, I just set it up 1:1 and do the routing instead to both stereo and mono mixer channels of the HRM-16 remotes.Hey erlilo, if it wasn't for Americans coming across the ocean and standing up to tyranny you'd be speaking Deutsche right now.

Your points are valid, we are addicted to cheap stuff, but we are throwing the baby out with the bath water. It's the oldest trick in the book, the shiny object in one hand while they've got their other hand in our other pocket. We are stupid for going for the cheap shiny little trinkets, because in the end it's a rip off. The cheap little trinkets won't stay cheap when whole industries are gone, prices will go up.

That's right, the Chinese hold American debt. Our Politicians that are responsible for that should be run out on a rail, but the people of this country are stupid, because they keep voting the same people back in to office. Our country needs manufacturing to stay safe and strong. The more we buy Chinese products, the more of our companies will shut down, and the more Americans will be out of work.

Somethings would be hard to do without, no doubt. It would take time to turn things around. People can vote with their dollars. Red wing shoes still makes some shoes in America, companies like this should be supported.

I'm saying when China does things like they did the other day the world should stand up and protest. For the good of our country we should buy American and stop buying chinese products if you can. Take the time to look to see where something is made and try to buy American. The other day I bought Fruit of the Loom socks, I had a choice between American made and Pakistani made, the same price. The foreign made stuff should sit on the shelves until it rots. Voices should be heard when it comes to foreign made products, when there are so many American jobs being lost.

That's because they only seem to want to build stuff for the still-shrinking super high-end market... hard to get cash influx when your target market is on the wane. Kinda like making super expensive buggy whips right as Henry Ford had just finished building his first assembly line.

Neill agree. The products their putting out for this super-duper card is pitiful at best. But, they think they have a market for it. Oh well. Can we say NED(Synclavier)..

>Mike,

Overall, very nice work. Little things that bugged me:

- Some of the crash samples are a little fake sounding to me. They didn't seem to tonally meld with the loops/etc. (e.g. 0:39, 0:50, 0:54) That may just be me though.
- at 0:29 the filter goes too far and the volume chokes the tune away... and then hits too hard immediately after that. The effect is good, but I'd want it to be smoother, more like the one at 1:29.
- Check your volume automation at 1:37. I feel you should be back at 100% right there, instead of 1:40 where it seems to jump up, but after the vocal has returned, which feels odd. Try finishing that fade up right as the vocal comes back, or just a little before.
- Agree re: the piano being too hot at 3:54.

Again, nice work. What host and instruments are you using? And which reverb?

Erling, I hear ya, but more blame should go on those rich privileged French families than on their American relatives. I'll leave this alone so I do not offend anyone and start WWII, and I hope others will do the same. I don't think anybody here would really like That history lesson.

I'll just say that northern Europe wasn't doing too good against the Nazis, until guys like my uncle James John McCloskey showed up, and you should never forget it.

After a while, one guy looks at the other and says, "I can't help but think, from listening to you, that you're from Ireland "

The other guy responds proudly, "Yes, that I am"

The first guy says, "So am I

And where about from Ireland might you be?"

The other guy answers, "I'm from Dublin, I am."

The first guy responds, "Sure and begora, and so am I. And what street did you live on in Dublin?"

The other guy says, "A lovely little area it was, I lived on McCleary Street in the old central part of town."

The first guy says, "Faith & it's a small world, so did I. So did I. And to what school would you have been going?"

The other guy answers, "Well now, I went to St. Mary's of course."

The first guy gets really excited and says, "And so did I. Tell me, what year did you graduate?"

The other guy answers, "Well, now, let's see, I graduated in 1964."

The first guy exclaims, "The Good Lord must be smiling down upon us!"

I can hardly believe our good luck at winding up in the same bar tonight. Can you believe it, I graduated from St. Mary's in 1964 my own self."

About this time, Vicky walks into the bar, sits down, and orders a beer.

Brian, the bartender, walks over to Vicky, shaking his head & mutters, "It's going to be a long night tonight"

Vicky asks, "Why do you say that, Brian?"

"The Murphy twins are drunk again." "The second worldwar started, as far as I remember in 1938 here in Europe.

USA came into the war about 3 years later and it was just because Japan was allied with Germany when they attacked Pearl Harbor. In those 3 years, most of America was doing big business, selling whatever they could to the fighting parts. The same thing was happening in the first worldwar and it was first when a passengership filled up with American business people, that was making big warcontracts in Europe, was attacked by a German submarine in the Atlantic Ocean and sunk, America was involved. Most of these people had friends in, or was involved in the American Parlamenty in one or another way, so there was no way out from being involved in that war on the "right" side.

So, what I'm saying with my words are, Americans are just humans in their heads, like the rest of the world, with exactly the same good and bad sides as the rest of the world, filling up their heads. Most of the difference and problems are in the HUMAN made religions that's for the most have a culture thousand of years back in the history. It's special to think it over, the bible was a product that's started our christian stories from the Middle East with stories about God and The Garden of Eden(in Iran) and all the wars following up, long before someone could write at all.

All humans need something to be proud of, as the telling stories in the old bible, all humans need and must have something to hate or love, also in these modern times as in the start of the bible. It have allways been the victory in wars that have started the glory in stories, as said well in song we all knows well, "The winner takes it all".

It's a really good idea to also get involved the real stories of how a war is starting and not just remember the glorifying endings when a nation mean they alone saved the world from the bad enemies. All American stories started in Europe with all problems here some hundred years ago. It's just the human nature trying to do something to survive, a paralell to the problems of the Israel people in Egypt that get Moses to glorify their history and find the land with milk and honey, as Europeans found out that America had all the milk and honey they needed to survive.

I love America but I also love Europe and the rest of the world, where good people allways trying to do a difference for the soul.

Thanks for listening.

Americans are just humans, with all the positive and negative sides, as the rest of the world have.

By the way, do you know anything about the Norwegian story in the second world war and do you know Norway is in North Europe? Maybe you should have a talk with Bill L, he is an American that's knowing the Norwegian story very well. If it wasn't for Norwegian seaman under the second worldwar, arghhhh it's time to stop before I'm glorifying little Norway, that many Americans don't know a shit about, over America in that war;-)

>In fairness to my fellow Americans, what you say is true but it's damned difficult to learn any US history in America. The tiny bit that is taught before college is taught horribly, and is about the driest subject one ever takes. Which is sad since US history is so full of robber barons and wildcatters and other incredibly interesting people. But if a person wants to find out the good, bad, and ugly of US history in America one pretty much has to go it alone.

Gantt,
In the church's MEC I have 2-8 channel input cards and am running all analog, so I figure no need for clock. I have 16 TRS to XLR cables coming from 2-8 channel Bheringer preamps to the 2 cards. Then in my spare MEC, I have 1-8 channel input card doing the same thing but of course with only 18 channel preamp.

>The Jewish conspiracy thing was a justification created in Europe as far back as the Crusades to avoid paying debts to Jews. It's a brilliant plan, really:

1. Forbid Jews living anywhere but the ghetto, for convenience in locating them
2. Forbid Jews doing anything but money lending, banking, gold/silver smithing, etc.
3. When you owe too much money to a Jew, kill him.
4. If anyone complains about you killing him, say, "Everyone knows the Jews have horns and eat Christian babies."
5. Walk away scott and debt free!

During the Crusades, it was common practice for a German army heading off to Jerusalem to make a swing through the ghetto and erase all their debts (kill their bankers) before the long march to reclaim the "Holy Land".

went to the same school as George Bush Sr, Greenwich Country Day School, from pre-K to 9th grade, and I don't remember any American history at all, actually. I suppose there must have been some, but it was pretty dull, I guess.

It seemed like all we got was English history. New Englanders are rather Anglophilic.

Cubase without having to export a mix? I know they want us to buy Wavelab, but that way of working is over.

One great thing about Samplitude is it started as an editor, so it has full editor capabilities at all times. Too bad I don't like it anymore, except for file editing. Bill L <bill@billlorentzen.com> wrote:

You can do this in a way... if you bounce the track (with or without creating an event) you end up with a file called "bounce snare 1" or similar... then you can just go into the audio file folder for that project, and copy that file over to wherever you want it to go.

You can always undo the bounce after that if you want to. If you want to be super safe, then clone the track first, THEN do the bounce thing on the cloned track, that way you keep all edits & original file remnants on the first version of that track.

NeilLOL!! WK pricing structure is definitely out of step. Too Bad, with the right price, they could sold a ton of those controllers..

It's the whole pretense that you still need an editor that bugs me.

>James, if it wasn't for Pearl Harbour, Americans had only made money on both parts in the last worldwar, like president Bush's granddad did really well under that war. Isn't it time to learn some real history about how America was being involved in both the first and second worldwar, years after they really started? I wrote about these historical facts here some years ago, in the days when Iraq was being occupied, so if you're interested, you can try to find the posts from those days, or you can find it some other places, like the internet, that I know you love to search after meanings you can follow. It's unbelievable that many Americans yet don't know a shit about historical facts and still yelling about the glory they got around their heads after the two worldwars and still love to have these glories today, after all the shit some of their presidents have made in newer times around the world.

>Hey Graham
Thanks for the reply. All the feedback has been really helpful. I pretty much agree with all the suggestions that have been made. Its funny how that small still mixer voice was kind of whispering to me about most of them, but I don't listen when I'm listening. The verbs were all pretty much that Ambience vst set at "high quality." The delay on the vox was that old Karlette vst from Steinburg. I really like the bass sound which is a slightly tweaked patch from the Unifyer vsti "anabass." Most of the pads and keys are from either my Korg TR or JV1080. There's a small guitar part on the chorus out -telecaster through that free voxengo booex -I think its called. (By the way, I've been messin' around with the simuanalog marshall emulation which sounds pretty damn good.)
Anyhow, thanks again, MR

>>Erling, When you talk about Americans, remember that the small number who made money from WW2 are not the same ones who laid down their lives or gave their time or sweat to save our European brothers and sisters.

Bankers and arms manufacturers are the ones who really win in a war.
It's been that way since the very first banker loaned a war lord or king money to finance a war, probably thousands of years ago. Part of the money they get back and part they take out in influence. Remember the hundred years war in Europe. That was a field day for the bankers. They gained enormous influence from that - so much so that they managed to keep the war going for a HUNDRED years, loaning money to all sides.

Please do not make the mistake of seeing all Americans as a great big generality. Yes, we elect some really, really crappy presidents and other leaders. My guess is it's about a 4:1 ratio of bad to good. But bear in mind we are heavily influenced by the lying PR spread by the same bankers who make money from the dumbass shit that 4 out of 5 presidents do at the bankers bidding.

For those with an interest in this sort of thing there is a fine and extremely enlightening book called "The Warlords" that details the influence bankers have had for many centuries in fomenting man's wars.

Bill made some great points, but along with those ...

Beware of those who speculate that the arms race and the money behind it is a vast jewish conspiracy.

Beware of those who postulate that the first banker to loan someone the money for a bomb was a jew.

Be on guard against those who espouse that jew x or jewish race Y is responsible for Z. In my experience people who raise these issues are morally bankrupt.

>The project was recorded on 16 bit ADATS using a Mackie 32x8 mixer(ADAT and Mackie pres)basically low end gear. This cut if I remember correctly only used 18 tracks the largest track count was the Yami Bolo cut. I think on that track we used 44 track,about 12-17 tracks of guitar alone. i still can't believe we needed that many guitar tracks. I only worked on the Yami Bolo,Mikey Dread,General Jah Mikey and Bunny Mystic tracks. At the time I didn't think it was that good. I thought it was rushed. Scientist mixed the whole project in 18 hrs!

I sat in on theYami Bolo track,but could stay in the control room for long.
Scientist in my opinion is losing his hearing. He was using what looked like 12" PA speakers to mix with,and they were loud! It was painful to my ears. everone else was very happy with the mixes. I guess it wasn't as bad as I remembered. Glad you liked it.

It's funny how so many people can rewrite history to suit their agenda and fit their lies. Do more reading and research, and eventually the truth will come out.

an do with it by just noodling around with the settings that keeps the attack just right without oversquashing so that it really thumps in the mix. You can do just a little boost and still meld with the bass guitar without needing to cut so much bass info at 400/800 Hz.at least on the material I am working on right now.

It's very retro and "alive" sounding. DL the demo and play around with it.
It's worth the trouble. Nice on snare and bass too.....but on kick, it rules.Sure!!!.....I'll give you my address!!! Send 'em on!!!

I find, for my tastes and how I work it to be best at lowered fundamental instruments/sounds.

I have a couple 160X's. Mono one space rack units..I use em sparingly on Kick and Snare in to paris. Not bad on bass either.

>>....and what did the New testament wrote about Jesus and the children?

Basically, a child are borned without any sin at all, but the familyculture a child is growing up in, will allways color the way a child will live and go. If you're telling your child that it is lost and doomed because of sins in your storytellings to a child, you are really taking the first steps to destroy a childs mind. In my eyes, religious brainwashing are just the words for this kind of doings. We are just giving our sivilization into the hands of our childrens future with the ways we're living the day.

There have allways been good and bad sivilizations, that could live in peace or make war, that have really been colored by good or bad leaders. For me, the old Bible is just a historical "cooking book" with recipes of ways to live, after someone seeing and learning about good and bad ways to live, told from mouth to mouth by good people up against thousand of years before someone could written the words down, with all that colorations the words had got from mouth to mouth in those thousand of years before being written down.

I will just call it with few words: The Wisdom Words of Life.

Thanks for listening.

always amazes me how so many people do not understand Christianity. A child is not told it is doomed, just the opposite. The child is told that if the child is baptized and believes in Jesus Christ, the child is saved!

>holy crap !!!!!!!!!!! I'm gonna die if I don't see them! This is the real deal. wow

Try to catch these guys too if you can:

<http://www.spyrogyra.com/tourdates.php>James, did you read DC's post that I answered and do I wrote English so badly that you couldn't see or understand what I wrote about the child? I know very well Christianity after living with my family in the American Church, "The Apostolic Faith" in Stavanger, Norway, as far as I remember in my youth. I know exactly well how it is to be confirmed with sins and "the right way of living" from my whole youth in late '40 and the '50. To be curious on the society in the town and the pulsing life outside The Apostolic Church, I was told nearly all the times in my youth that the people there lived in sin, so I should stay far away from them.

Unbelievable nice people in the Church, that did know what the bible said but didn't know anything about the society around them, because the society was just living in sin and was doomed in their eyes. Not any harm at all with these people, just that they had isolated themselves from the society in those old biblereadings, in the name of Christ.
So please James, don't tell me that I don't understand Christianity way of living, if it is that you're trying to say with your lines here.

Thanks for listening and give it a try to understand what I really wrote.
