few times. He was trying to line up some musicians for >a gig last Sunday at the Blue Heron Inn, a rustic place in rustic Duncan >Mills in rustic Sonoma County in rustic California. Leading the band was >a blues guitarist who I'd never heard of, and the bass player was someone >I'd never heard of. I'd never been to the place, and I hadn't anything else >going on, so I said, sure.
>How loud would we be? I asked. I have gotten used to just running everything >into a little mixer, then into a small amp with a line out to the PA.

>Oh, said the drummer, you don't have to bring an amp. I have this Berringer >Keyboard amp that's huge, has lots of power, lots of inputs, and sounds >great.
>Sound fabulous.
>Are you sure, I said? I've heard nothing but bad stories about Berringers, >although there are rumors that the newer stuff is not bad. Oh, don't worry, >this amp is great! he repeated. My "Spidey sense" was tin
