been the variety of bands they pull out, and the taste with which they seemed to schedule the program, ensuring that you never got too much of one thing, and that the festival would lift and relax at appropriate moments on appropriate days.

This year the festival seemed to have just one music type. Bland mid-paced alterative rock. Sure there was a certain amount of variation within that description, but with very few exceptions that was all that was heard. Gone was the idea of having some nice cruisy spaced out bands to fill the later part of Saturday afternoon, and then upping the pace as the night came about. Saturday afternoon sounded much like Saturday midday, which sounded much like Sunday afternoon, which sounded pretty similar to 9pm Friday night, which bore a striking resemblance to Sunday morning, which, in turn, sounded much like Saturday night. There was no weird unexpected acts breaking up the program. Well, there was Architecture in Helsinki on Saturday arvo who at least had brass, but certainly maintained a mid paced rock element. Overall variation was hard to find.

But perhaps, in part, this is because I'm changing and moving on in my tastes. I got home and, after a shower and a moment in a "real" toilet (whew!), promptly jumped on the net. www.google.com. "Jazz Festival Victoria".

Suffice to say I came back a little dissappointed. I feel like, for me at least, an era may have just come to an end. I kinda thought that I'd be going to Meredith still in twenty years, but this year I felt it was over for me. I'm not sure I'll go again. Depends on the program I guess. It's kinda annoying also given that I have always enjoyed the way Meredith sets me up for the holiday season. Usually second weekend in December, being just at the start of our summer, it gives you something to look forward to before christmas to kick off the festivities. You come away from the festival and go "Gee, I forgot, it's almost Christmas!"

Maybe I'll go one more time, just in case it was a one off...

I suspect the truth is though that I'm just over rock. Pity. Rock and I had some fun. ;o) I've known I'm tired of rock for a while, but not enjoying Meredith has really made me feel the sense of loss.

Oh well, there's plenty of other styles to explore. :o)

I wouldn't call what passes for rock these days to be rock. More like overcompressed pink noise punctuated by unoriginal boring angstlyric.

Rock was Led Zeppelin, Rock was Queen,. Rock is (or at least can be) the Eagles, Rock is Motley Crue, Rock is Areosmith, Rock is The Stones. There are some new bands coming along that I've heard recently that are really good and who actually use keyboards and write melodic compositions and know more than 3 chords. Rock is not and never was Green Day, Nine Inch Nails and the grungeclones that succeeded Nirvana.

Cheers,

Kim.yesm exactly, the 312 sound frigging great, but too hot even all the way down.

So I think just bringing the trim pots down should help.

I really don't want to use anything else on snare, tht is what I got em for!

THis also happens with my Langevins as well, I wnat to run em wide open, the dont break up at all, they just send a pretty hot signal out.

Oh and yep, I am set to +4

I am talking about the pre being all the way down and the pre having plenty of head room before breaking up. My MEC's 8in does not give me enough room, it was a used unit, could be the previous owner messed with it.

They are basically a hybrid of Led Zeppelin, Deep Purple, Black Sabbath and any other classic rock acts of that sound and time. Indeed they are too much of that. There is nothing original about them. They are becoming very popular over here, and indeed are apparently doing increasingly well overseas, and they kinda sound great, but in context of the festival, after two nights observing just how lifeless modern rock sounds to me, they were simply a flashing neon sign on stage that said "All the good stuff was years ago. It's over. Move on". Hearing this precise emulation of the old days did nothing other than remind me that we've run out of places to go with it.

I sat there listening, fully aware of why this band were headlining, but simply unable to overlook the simple fact that, much as they might be a nice copy, they simply weren't Led Zeppelin. Despite the fact that they used 70's lighting, camera angles and video effects for the on stage screen which was hug ely remenisant of something off that new Zeppelin DVD they released a while back. They had it all going on, but all it did was remind me that really, honesly, it all went down in 1972.

Of course I still do enjoy listening to a Beatles CD, or Zep, Queen, Bowie, Doors, whatever. I'm not so over rock that I never want to hear it again. It's just that I've heard all the tricks, and for me tricks only work a few times, then they lose their magic. There are still some great bands about. There's some band called The Beta Band about recently who have all the right ingredients, but all it does is remind me that I'm not listening to the actual originators of rock.

I need to go out and find music which has tricks in it that I haven't heard so much.

One of the other things I found irritating, is that aside from the festival being dissapointing, one of my mates had a go at me for complaining about it, and I'm like "Look dude, I would have loved to like the festival, but I didn't. What am I supposed to do? Lie?". It's frustrating to not only have to deal with a bad festival, but also look around at all the other people who are actually for some reason not seeming to see things in the same light, especially when they have a winge about it. ;o)

Anyhow, there's quite a number of jazz festivals I can go to next year, so with any luck I'll hit the jackpot with them. Unfortunately there don't seem to be any where you camp in the bush and watch bands on a stage, which I liked with Meredith, but hey, you can camp at the beach and drive to town to see bands, and camping at the beach aint too shabby. Does stop you drinking if you have to drive though. Ah well... maybe my liver will last longer. ;o)

Cheers,
Kim.

good, or at least knowing that you know enough to know that it's definately good.

As for my band, I don't currently have a band. I'm working on a solo show with a looping pedal (remember my live setup I posted?) but I've got a way to go yet. Mind you, strangely, they had a solo dude on around 12:30 Saturday night at Meredith, who's a one man band type deal. He plays electric guitar and has all kinds of instruments hanging off him, and he's famous for singing a song called "Boob Scotch". The song opens with him shouting "Hey!! You put your boob in my scotch!!". Mildly amusing the first time you hear it, but soon wears thin. Apparently live he gets a girl from the stage to put her boob in his scotch. I remember thinking though, given the fact that they come out of the band set into a DJ set starting about 1am which gets a bit more dancy and goes into the night, that they would have been better to have my solo act on than his. At least, with my largely funk and groove based show, I would have offered some kind of smooth transition from the rock bands to the more dance based DJ sets. If I get my show sounding OK I may put in a bid for next year. I'd be willing to go if I was playing. ;o)

Interesting insight about not expecting a festival to be good just b
