By the way, I'm going through the mix critiques/ tiny tweaks with ,my band usually the right move, but I don't like to mix by vote either. there is no one right way for sure.

What is also amazing is that you can still catch some of the masters in small

He guys,

It's been a month since my last post. Reason being
I broke my tibia fibula just above my ankle clean through on 12/30. =20

Got some titanium inserted inside where the marrow was and screwed in in three places. I spent five days in the hospital due to a fever I was running. The pain was incredible for the first three weeks. Now I'm barely taking the pain meds.
They helped alot though. Toes are moving and feeling. They tell me that's good. Ankle feels swollen and tender and is tough to move.

Physical therapy is in house which is great although very difficult. I am giving it all I've got to get back on my=20 feet asap. So far keeping the foot above my heart all the time is the best way to keep the swelling down along with ice after exercise.

I want you all to know that I've been looking in here over the last few weeks and it's great to feel some what normal again. I can't spend more than 30 minutes at a desk. The studio has been out of the question although I'm looking for a way to=20 rest my foot on the console without falling out of my chair. I am gigging once or twice/week which is way

It seems the RIAA is not only intentionally biting the hand that feeds it, it's also trying to rip it off and pretend it doesn't need it. The RIAA isn't out to protect creative ownership rights, it's trying to destroy it with a shortsighted view of profit-grabbing, rather than seeing a potential for increased profits in the future for all, albeit not at the exorbitant rate they are wanting to grab now.

Imho, musicians, artists and independants should lobby to get the federal courts to outlaw or restrict the RIAA's approach or there won't be a profitable music industry left for anyone, much less record labels. This is a very dangerous line they are walking, and why they can't see the longterm disaster awaiting the record industry being massively hastened such tactics is beyond me. Why in the heck would I even bother writing music for 0.58% share? I wouldn't - it would take massive sales just to pay for a demo session. Why would the buying public buy songs that are going to bring big brother (RIAA) down on them? They won't. Artists are next - just wait, the suggested artist royalty will also be below 1%. That should just about tank the established recording industry completely.

Songwriters already make very little compared to the income generated from a successful song, and composers make less (the US is the only country that does not pay royalties to composers for film distribution/performance, and sync royalties are far below that of a song for the same broadcast).

Are you looking at the Mixer window, or the Editor window, to be sure the track isn't muted? Often in the Editor, when I move a window round, the mute (and solo) button will cease to display the "engaged" state (pressed down & hilighted). I haven't seen this in the Mixer window, just the Editor.

Just a thought

So, I asked him.

He said he was a little busy right now, but thanks....

;-P

He was actually a very good interview. Well-spoken, cordial.

It didn't hurt to have Pamela in the studio with us to chat about stuff. She and Tate had quite a bit to talk about.

By the way, they will be starting recording on a new Queensryche album in March, probably to be released Jan of 09. According to Geoff, it'll be another Mindcrime-style concept album, but with a completely different theme.

Cool.

Whoa!!!! That was freakin' amazing! I'm impressed that not only did she do an awesome job with the vocal lines, but she also had to keep switching voices and play different parts. I'm assuming the drums were sequenced, but I wonder how much of the rest was sequenced and how much was hers.
