[illegible]

I want to use Paris to control Tracktion. I'm using the Frontier Design Dakota/Sierra configuration as the audio/midi card in the Tracktion machine and having a hell of a time getting Sync to happen properly with my Paris rig. I can't use the ADAT sync out of Paris v3 in Xp because of the known ADAT issues in Paris Xpv3 (you can't even drive a regular ADAT with it) and it doesn't appear that I have any other alternative but to stripe a SMPTE track in Paris and use that to drive the Sierra/Dakota which converts the SMPTE to MTC which Tracktion understands. My attempts at this approach are making me want to buy an Sm-58, a 4 track Syncassette and a cheeseey drum machine!

I unlock Tracktion from Paris altogether Tracktion audio plays back fine through Paris.(Sounds great actually - BFD is a great tool)

Anyway, any ideas as to what I am doing wrong here or what the problem might be or even another approach I might take? I know I'm not worthy, but I almost feel deej-like here in terms of my self imposed convolution!

Any help is greatly appreciated!

Cheers,

The ADAT modules send ADAT timecode in Paris XP, the same as they do in Win
9x. The Paris SX driver doesn't recognize ADAT machines, but the module sends timecode just fine.

I stopped having luck with the Dakota card once I upgraded from Cubase v1.6
to v2.0 because I was no longer able to match the buffer settings in the Cubase SX application to the buffer settings in the Dakota control panel. My theory is that for some reason, the Dakota ADAT sync input doesn't allow the system to lock up properly to incoming Paris ADAT sync if the sync settings can't be matched in the actual audio application and the Dakota control panel. No clue why. I don't know about Traktion, but an RME card works flawlessly with Paris ADAT sync in Cubase SX.

and it doesn't

Brian T. posted a while back that he was using a pair of Steinberg MidEX interfaces to lock Paris to Nuendo. This might be the ticket for you.

Yep, sounds like some sort of buffer issue you have there.

I heard rumors that he accidentally tripped behind his equipment rack and was devoured by snakes.

If the card don't fit, you must quit.....RME=problem free

The snake eater.

;o) For some time I've been ranting and raving about the possibility of moving to St Kilda, which, for those of you who don't live in or know Melbourne (all but about 2 of you ;o) is an inner city suburb by the beach, full of flats, pubs, bars, flats, cafes, bakeries, pubs, restaurants, bars, pubs, lots of public transport, pubs and bars, oh, and did I mention pubs...

Last night however I went to another Melbourne suburb, being Northcote, and went to a bar, and a pub. ;o) Northcote has been on the possibility list for a while, but I think last night has nidded it up the list. Firstly, I really liked the two places we went last night. At the second bar, for example, a band was packing up, and I saw the guy packing up his double bass... and a band with a double bass sounds promising to me... and meanwhile, as the band was finished, some old 40's music was playing through the PA. The bar before that had on one of my favourite CD's of the last few years, being David Holmes "Come Get it. I Got it".

Plus, Northcote is only about 15 minutes from work, whereas St Kilda is more like 45 minutes...

....but Northcote isn't near the beach! ;o);

....mind you, in my price range, in St Kilda I'm likely to only get some tiny little 2 bedroom flat in a multistory block, whereas in Northcote I might actually get myself a small actual house, which would be good, and have spaces to park more than one car... and, of course, not being a multistory flat, I may be able to get away with actually doing some recording of loud instruments.

I think I might have to change destinations...

Cheers,

Kim. In which area are you most likely to get laid, and by who?

Ya know sometimes I wish I didn't love the way Paris sounds so much.. or that they would have gotten the friggin' midi part right.. or that it supported VSTi's ... or that it just plain was being updated and supported. All I want to do is write songs and record them well. This nerdy stuff gets frustrating.

Oh well, looks like now I'm back to getting lost in kluge-land again....guess I'll look into the hardware you suggested. It's still cheaper than replacing Paris and nothing else sounds as good (that's affordable anyway).

How are the pooches doing by the way!

Thanks,
Jon

Since the "Paris Smppte track to Sierra interface to the Dakota converting to MTC out to Tracktion" scenario doesn't seem to be working what hardware/card would you suggest?

s, which is like 65 F. Not extra warm, but it's been fine and sunny. There's no risk of snow, or of your car frosting up overnight.

I'm trying to find some pics of Northcote. Stupidly I actually drove through there earlier today and should have taken a couple of snaps with my mobile but I didn't. I can't seem to find any.

Suffice to say that Northcote's life is centred mostly around a street, originally called "High St", which is one of those streets with a long hodge podge of mostly shopfront buildings of wildly varying ages. It's a fairly busy street, with a tram line running down the middle of it... not the kind of street you want to step out onto without looking twice. It's a road with parking on both sides, trams going both ways (I think you guys call trams "cable cars") and almost, but annoyingly not quite, enough space between the parked car and the tram to drive a car in between. ;o) From shop to shop you can find anything from electrical goods, food, coffee, fruit, bread, bars, and most anything else you can imagine.

I've attached a couple of pics from Real Estate sites of shopfronts in High St currently selling. OK, so they're boring stores that are selling, but you can get a vague idea of what the street looks like if you imagine some bars and other stores, and "cable cars" and the lik

Yeh we're pretty south. I don't think there's any cities this big further south. It's not incredibly cold though. I mean it's obviously not extra warm, but it's winter here at the moment and it's been like 18 celciu e...

....hold on, can only get one pic on the web interface at once... ok... three posts...

Cheers,
Kim.

Unfortunately I still haven't heard back from Chuck on the No Limit plug, which I paid for using pay pal last Monday. Does anyone have an alternative e-mail address / contact details? Alternatively - I'm not sure how copy protection works here - perhaps someone could e-mail me No Limit. I have paid for it, and have a copy of the Pay Pal receipt... I just don't have the plug in. Thanks for any assistance.

Im a guitarist, never owned a keyboard, cant play one and dont really plan on learning how to play. Im just looking to get something I can tinker with and get some cool sounds out of. Either for weird effects or just adding ambience or filler type stuff to tracks. Im not really into messing around with soft synths so whatever I get should come with alot of sounds built in though the ability to access external sounds would be a plus. My budget is around $400 or less.

What would you guys suggest to fit my needs?

Thanks in advance! Find a cheapo controller and a used Roland JV-1010 half rack. Those make pretty decent sounds, are expandable and should be right there in your price range.

I agree, Behr has some real serious quality control issues, but generally if you get a good one, it's a good one. Not stellar, mind you, but I digress at this point. I had a 2442 mixer that was a flaming pile of crap on the other hand... muting channels would not only change whether I had a 60Hz hum or not, it would change the volume and pitch of it depending on what channels saw the mute action.
