You need to be using ASIO direct monitoring. Even at 1.5ms latency you will hear some phasing because you are not only getting 1.5ms latency due to the uffers, you are also getting around 1.5ms with your AD/DA conversion. As to hearing this on previously recorded material, I don't know, but it sounds like you've got some kind of loop with the recorded tracks being monitored in the record enabled track. Ain't native fun?

Go to your control panel for you audio hardware and make sure ASIO direct monitoring is enabled. then, in cubase, go to Device Setup and .set your system for ASIO direct monitoring.

e and their best interests as a whole.

Since I'm on the subject. A 5 year old could have told you that the math doesn't work in Iraq. You can't have 150 thousand troops take on a country with over 35 million people, in a country the size of California, with over 3,000 miles of porous borders, with hostile enemies surrounding you. Only 40 thousand are combat troops, the rest are support. Insurgents pouring across the borders everyday. You can't possibly win, you can't sweep a country that size with those few troops. It's been a recipe for failure from the start and I hold Bush fully responsible for that. The only people to win are the Halliburtons of the war and their friends. For our government to pay them 100 million dollars for stuff they couldn't account for is unforgivable.

We can't fight a war with our hands tied behind our backs. We can't fight a war without the proper equipment, or the necessary funds.

I also hold Clinton responsible for shutting down our military and closing bases. We no longer have the troop levels to fight wars and protect us. That is NOT a good thing! H

I'm with you... But where is the line? Can you say that I hope we lose a war? Can you say the president should be killed? Can you yell "fire" in a crowded theater? Can you incite to riot? Can you publish information that is likely to cause the death of US military personnel?

It is so damn easy to be for "free speech" and so damn hard to admit that nothing is free...

DCNo their hate did not do them in.. The CIA did them in.

Thanks for cool topics and debates.. LaMont :)James!! Dudue.. Let's meet up and have a beer.
You need a break form all of this political BS.. Trust me, for last 2 years, btw the Fox news network and talk radio, I was going nuts!!!

Put down the mouse... Turn off the TV and radio.. Go over to your drums..
And Play!!! :)

Then, let's meet up at Champs on M-59(next to the lexus dealership).. Oh...
Wait.. too many TVs in there..

Maybe a PSP 84?

TCBI use the LA2A on vox, is the fairchild that much better? I used up my demo too long ago, and did not get into it enough.

In what ways are you using the 1176 on drums?
Is the LN much better?

Should I go for the Helios or fairchild next?

Oh an I love my real 201 space echo too. I think of it almost as instrument sometimes.

Yes, it's exactly the same as the big version of both neve eq's
For the way I do things, that means 400 ms back (4x100) and 1505 samples on sampleslide

RodNo, it isn't really better, just different, I just find myself using it more, for my taste.

snare sometimes, kik sometimes, room mics sometimes, toms sometimes, Overheads sometimes. It's just probably the most versatile, so I picked that. I'm actually starting to use the Neve comp on snare a lot these days. I didn't list it because it's a DSP hog, sounds great on snare though (and bass guitar)

Brian T. actually liked the SE version better for drums, I still usually use the LN, they're pretty close, imo

I'd say the Fairchild, but that's because I haven't had enough time with the helios yet to get the hang of it. How about both?

Better? Subjective call...but for what I am wanting to hear, the Fairchild usually gets it done. To my ears, it is much smoother and responsive to nuance than the LA2 (which, just so you know, neither are really that close to the originals...I've heard a well maintained Fairchild in a studio, and it is as close to a sonic orgasm as I've heard - but they cost $30,000 plus an additional $5K to maintain each year.)

>In what ways are you using the 1176 on drums?

>Is the LN much better?

I use the 1176 pretty much as a flavor enhancer and limiter, running drum submixes on the 1st button (4 db), attack time at 9 release at about 2-3...some people like the "all buttons" setting - not my cup of coffee..."James McCloskey" <excelsm@hotmail.com> wrote in message

When you combine that with the "Soar" button, you have an unbeatable combination.

NeilHey Kim.

I have a pile of this shit that I accumulated through the years for my K2000.

No 2gb drives, but about half dozen 1GB Seagates, a SCSI zip that I picked up from "The Brotherhood" for 5 bucks, on one of my previous trips to your fair city, and several CD-Roms/burners that may work with the ASR.

Also A bunch of cables, old SCSI cases/power supplies etc.

Just so happens I'm gonna be in Melb in a week or two.

Wanna hook up this time?

Let me know and I will bring over what I've got.

Kim.

>Kim,

I'd definitely like to catch up regardless, but if you bring all that stuff, beer and a counter meal are definitely on me!

Aside from switching and changing the ASR can of course take 7 SCSI devices anyhow, so it all sounds good. I have a couple of 2 gig drives coming from Perth shortly, and various other bits of hardware have turned up. Suffice to say I'll just collect as much as I can I think. Anything I don't use immediately can be put in storage in case anything breaks. Identical sized drives are ideal too as the ASR can only copy from one device to another if the drives are identical.

Let me know when you're coming. IIRC you stay only a short distance up the road anyhow, so hopefully we can get together. Email me and I'll shoot you my mobile no.

Cheers,

Kim.

We worked with a dub guy named Mikey Dread on this so I have some decent space echo stuff in there.

The song Ordinary Day on my bands last CD I used 2 on a guitar set slightly different, one of the 201's had a slightly warped capstan or something., so it also flanged a bit.

I also just used mine in a ripping clash style tune for a subtle pre chorus tension builder.
