I think Steve Hinson has been doing the guitar thing with them. He's a great authority on vintage country guitar (as well as steel gtr and southern rock) My retooling phase keeps getting put off as well. That's why I'm starting early. Good luck.

Your Paris rig is going to be more flexible on windows ME than any other OS.
This is due to limitations regarding the XP driver and Paris ADAT modules.
If you can live with one ADAT module per MEC, XP will give you lots more VST

No politics? Hehe. I wouldn't say it's none. I'd say there's a fair bit.
;o) I don't think I'm a Nazi moderator. ;o) I'd like to think not.

But seriously, if anybody hasn't tried Vegemite and is interested, why not?
Email me. If we get too many I may have to ask for donations, but next time
I go shopping I could probably ship 20 off in half an hour, so I'm up for
it. :o) If people posted back with pics it could be quite a hoot. ;o)

You'd have to eat it in the studio for the pic though, I guess. ;o)

Good morning, sir. Welcome to the National Cheese Emporium.

MOUSEBENDER:
Ah, thank you my good man.

WENSLEYDALE:
What can I do for you, sir?

MOUSEBENDER:
Well, I was, uh, sitting in the public library on Thurmond Street just now, skimming through Rogue Herries by Hugh Walpole, and I suddenly came over all peckish.

WENSLEYDALE:
Peckish, sir?

MOUSEBENDER:

Esurient.

WENSLEYDALE:

Eh?

MOUSEBENDER:

Eeeeeee, I were all hungry, like!

WENSLEYDALE:

Ah, hungry.

MOUSEBENDER:

In a nutshell. And I thought to myself, 'a little fermented curd will do the trick'. So I curtailed my Walpoling activities, sallied forth, and infiltrated your place of purveyance to negotiate the vending of some cheesy comestibles.

WENSLEYDALE:

Come again?

MOUSEBENDER:

I'd like to buy some cheese!
