
Subject: Totally OT - Interpretive Juggling - Awesome
Posted by Don Nafe on Sun, 19 Mar 2006 21:22:53 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

the sound >>>> libraries? Realistically I'd like about 20 drum sets stored in the box >>>> using exactly the drum samples I supply. Of course

Subject: Re: Totally OT - Interpretive Juggling - Awesome
Posted by Don Nafe on Sun, 19 Mar 2006 22:21:38 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

us other useful extra features, at about the same price point.
>>>>> Doesn't look as well built, though.
>>>>>
>>>>> A DDrum5 is said to be under development but who knows if or when we'll >>>>> see it.
>>>>>
>>>>> The Roland TD20 is an improvement over their previous efforts but >>>>> overpriced.
>>>>>
>>>>> The Trap Kat always seemed like a cool unit to me. Compact. But I like >>>>> my DDrum kit's layout. I ditched the rack and have

Subject: Re: Totally OT - Interpretive Juggling - Awesome
Posted by Tom Bruhl on Mon, 20 Mar 2006 01:59:53 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

d set pan/volume positions > easily. I played a roland at guitar center and thought the sounds were > hip hop oriented and sucked for rock/jazz.
>
> And do any of them have a highhat that works right?
>
> Thanks !!
>
> Jamie K wrote:
>>
>> For electronic drums: My DDrum 4 kit has taken a serious beating for >> years without complaints or failure. I have the cast precision pads >> which they don't make anymore but you can find that version of the kit >> used on ebay. I've replaced the heads with long lasting mesh heads >> which I prefer to the standard drum heads, but you can use either with >> those pads. This setup offers positional sensing.
>>

>> For live I use the internal sounds which are reasonably responsive and >> convincing. It was the most convincing electronic set at the time I >> chose it. Still one of the best. I recently got a DW/Pacific Chameleon >> kit (mesh on one side, regular head on the other) to try with DDrum >> triggers. Can use it as an acoustic kit or as a trigger kit.
>>
>> For recording I sometimes use DDrum samples but more often trigger
>> Native Instruments' Battery 2 via MIDI to control bigger sample sets
>> (you can also sample your own sounds for Battery 2). I also use >> additional pads through an Alesis D4 so I can trigger my 6 tom, 7 >> cymbal, plus a few specials, mondo kit. I built my own extra pads out >> of Remo practice pads, old mouse pads and piezo pickups, they've been >> surprisingly long lived.
>>
>> If I were buying a new electronic kit I'd give serious thought to the >> Yamaha DTXtremeII since it has more trigger inputs than the DDrum4, >> plus other useful extra features, at about the same price point.
>> Doesn't look as well built, though.
>>
>> A DDrum5 is said to be under development but who knows if or when >> we'll see it.
>>
>> The Roland TD20 is an improvement over their previous efforts but
>> overpriced.
>>
>> The Trap Kat always seemed like a cool unit to me. Compact. But I like >> my DDrum kit's layout. I ditched the rack and have it mounted on >> standard hardware, plays like a regular kit.
>>
>> Another option: You could build your own pads or throw triggers onto >> an acoustic kit; use whatever you want to get trigger-to-MIDI (it >> wouldn't have to sound good internally, an old Alesis or Roland, or >> maybe someone has done it in software); and then use Battery 2, a >> general purpose sampler or one of the preset drum romplers like BFD >> for your actual sound library.
>>
>> Cheers,
>> -Jamie
>> <http://www.JamieKrutz.com>
>>
>>
>> John wrote:
>>> I have a Trap Kat drum electronic drum set and think it's time to get >>> a new set. This one has 24 pads which allows for a great variety of >>> drum sounds but it has no windows program to configure the midi parts >>> of it and I have to use an external sound module (my motif keyboard) >>> for the sounds. To make matters worse, the sensors fail every 2 >>> years. I've had it for 7 years. So every 2 years they want $200 for >>> a new film pad.

>>>
>>> So.....
>>>
>>> Is there an electronic drum set with lots of pads that is reliable?
>>> Is there a windows midi interface program for it?
>>>
>>> Ideally I want to have a couple thousand drum sounds in a library and >>> be able to EASILY build drum sets based on them, then easily switch

Subject: Re: Totally OT - Interpretive Juggling - Awesome
Posted by Kim on Mon, 20 Mar 2006 09:25:04 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

>>> drum sets. I want to be able to easily configure the pan/volumes of >>> each drum in the set through a windows midi app. Can this be done?
>>> Easily? This is 2006 for crying out loud.
>>>
>>> Thanks.
>>> John"Babu" <musiclab@lund.bonet.se> wrote:

And from mine as well.

Best wishes

DC"Babu" <musiclab@lund.bonet.se> wrote:

>for API for pop/rock though. Lots of clean gain for q

Subject: Re: Totally OT - Interpretive Juggling - Awesome
Posted by cujo on Mon, 20 Mar 2006 14:30:29 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

und robin groups to, for example, alternate > left and right hit sample sets as you play. You can combine cells for > multi-micing, so you have a cell for top snare, one for bottom snare, > one for OH snare, etc., all assigned to the same MIDI note to trigger > together.
>
> You can save and load cells. You can save and load entire kits. Make as > many as you want. It does take a few seconds to load a big kit off the HD.

>
> B2 can load any .wav sample, maybe some other formats. It comes with a > multi-miced kit and some other kits. You can add your own samples, > either purchased sample sets or drums recorded by you.
>
> It is limited only by hard drive space and some reasonable minimum > amount of RAM.
>
> So yes, right now I think Battery 2 comes the closest to doing what you > are asking. It's the closest I've seen to what I want in a DDrum 5. It > also has some other tricks like built-in compression and EQ on a per > cell basis, and the ability to modulate things (wav delay by velocity, > for example, to cut off the initial attack on

Subject: Re: Totally OT - Interpretive Juggling - Awesome

Posted by [Deej \[1\]](#) on Tue, 21 Mar 2006 07:01:30 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

;>>
>>>> A DDrum5 is said to be under development but who knows if or when we'll
>>>> see it.
>>>>
>>>> The Roland TD20 is an improvement over their previous efforts but
>>>> overpriced.
>>>>
>>>> The Trap Kat always seemed like a cool unit to me. Compact. But I like >>>> my DDrum kit's layout. I ditched the rack and have it mounted on
>>>>>

Subject: Re: Totally OT - Interpretive Juggling - Awesome

Posted by [jef knight\[1\]](#) on Wed, 22 Mar 2006 17:19:27 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

compressor 1176LN you can put it to severe compressing
> >>
> >>>> where
> >>>> then you have a volume to bus it on OUTPUT.
> >>>> Then if you try an eq you are eq'ing the dry signal and not the compressed
> >>>> !, and then you have also a separate volume for the eq'ed vox, then

Subject: Re: Totally OT - Interpretive Juggling - Awesome
Posted by [Miguel Vigil \[1\]](#) on Sun, 26 Mar 2006 19:57:05 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

f="mailto:1@linux..." target="_blank">1@linux...
>>
>> would = >you=20

> do
you
>> think it would be=20
> worth?
>>
>>
>> "James McCloskey" <<A=20
> href=3D"mailto:excelsm@hotmail.com">excelsm@hotmail.com>=20 > wrote:
>>>
>>>I'm kind of thinking out=20
> loud.
>>>
>>>What kind of native plugins would =
>you=20
> guys like to see developed for=20
> =
>
>>>Paris?
>>>
>>>
>>>Wha= >t do=20
> you think you guys would be willing to pay for these=20
> plugins?
>>>
>>>If we could get the algorithms =
>ported=20
> from the Ensoniq DP pro, what would >>>you guys be willing = >to pay=20
> for that?
>>>
>>>I'm not sure that this is = >possible,=20
> but, what would you guys be willing >> to >>>pay = >for=20
> automatic plugin delay compensation?
>>>
>>>If =
>you=20
> could have somebody do coding work for Paris, what would you=20

>for this=20
