Isn't it funny that China, the biggest polluter on the planet is exempt from the law and rules the world gov. is trying to put in place. Why? This is all part of the trilateralist plan to shift the money around. The world banks have now set up inside of China.

They are trying to scare people in to a sin tax. It's about money, they want a sin tax to build up the rest of the world. It's about controlling the world economically. They want to restrict what america can build and do in the future.

As I've said before, there many scientists that say it is not true. And I'll say, look at what is really behind this. People like Al Gore are profiting from this, and hanging on to power.

ming our country, and woven into every conversation from here to eternity. I won't bother to explain "fabric" to you since you didn't get it last time.

If you want to play the game of associating yourself with the past for sake of playing victim, I'm part American Indian (direct descendant), and "we" were here first, and the first to lose rights and freedoms here. ;-)
If you want to associate history with present day people, why not claim Germany is racist and doomed because of Hitler's genocidal mania? How about the Netherlands for the barbarians?

Enough of this. I only came back to be clear about how diluded you are in your assumptions in this debate. It used to be fun to hang out here and exchange opinions, however diverse, but this tangent really takes the cake
- must be the twilight zone now. I guess now you'll rant about how "cake" or the word "twilight" is a "bull****" word as a result of slavery by some twisted and bizarre association as well. Have fun.

>Remember where I asked you to put aside Al Gore and Exxon for a moment?
Scientifically they don't matter. Don't get distracted.

The scientific point is this: Evidence exists that shows the strong possibility that humans contributions to greenhouse gases are currently affecting the climate.

If you really care about conservation it would be foolish to ignore decades of data in peer-reviewed scientific journals. It would be extremely limiting to cherrypick a few scientists who disagree (or who you think disagree) and ignore the rest.

At some point you're directly participating in a different conspiracy of sorts, as a member of a group that deliberately ignores evidence and attacks the messengers in the process.

How is that helpful?

It's not.

hey everybody. let's take a break and cool down. Conspiracies are another matter.

Back to the science: Evidence shows the strong possibility that humans contributions to greenhouse gases are currently affecting the climate.

If you suspect that some groups are trying to exploit this data for nefarious purposes, then fine, take on those groups. Dig into whatever conspiracies you want.

But don't pretend that the scientific data doesn't exist. You can promote your political views without attacking climate scientists or dismissing scientific conclusions.

Pretty clean, concise and easy to navigate pages, I like the layout Bill.
It's all about delivery of content in short frames of time, as you've correctly done. Social networking pages make me absolutely insane with all the junk 'bling' all over them.

Since you are familiar with Adobe stuff, no doubt you're aware they bought macromedia and now handle flash. Let me just say this. As an end user/business network installer, flash in a browser now sucks. Adobe has totalled screwed it up... why's that matter? If you design any flash components your pages likely will have a high correct load failure.

How good/bad is Expression Web to operate?
Proprietary components?

Bill, what CSS book are you using? Do you recommend it?

>I don't think we're going to convince James, but it's a lot of other thinking members of this group. I hope some of them take the message, it's not about left or right, it's about doing the right thing. This group know about science (recorded music is mainly about physics and technology, right?), and the world need that kind of people right now, to cut the crap and focus on the facts given us by the scientists, and the facts tells us that we are facing rough times, even in our lifetime. So, as I said, step up to the plate, this is not religion, this is facts. This is not the end of the world, this is not the end of humanity, but this may be the end of our civilisation. In other words: no nurcery homes for you , no healthcare for your children, no law, no order ...

I'm sorry to hear they screwed up Flash, but no wuckers, I won't be writing any Flash stuff for a while! Adobe is tops in the print medias area IMHO, so most likely they will sort things out soon.

I bought a book on Expression Web "Using Expression Web", but it's got plenty of CSS in it, OY!

There is a lot there to think about. that has nothing to do with race.

Traction? Don't have a clue what you are talking about and don't think you do either. It looks like you jumped in about half way through the topic and are responding to something you know nothing about. But that's ok. I wasn't responding to you anyhow. I was responding to Rick's statement. ORIGINALLY he clearly said the tower of babel was not about languages it was about gods. As soon as you quit attacking me, I will drop the subject.
