became dominant in a free marketplace, with competitive products against bigger, better-funded companies, including Mr. Smith's employer,

Again, what is he complaining about?

Quite a bit, as it turns out:

"In short, if Google and DoubleClick are allowed to merge, Google will become the overwhelmingly dominant pipeline for all forms of online advertising."

for advertisers and, most importantly, it will be bad for consumers."

In other words, Mr. Smith is suggesting, Google will become like Microsoft!

I hope somebody in Washington remembers the honor roll of companies that Microsoft put out of business by leveraging its own monopoly of the desktop operating system.

from the days when shorting whatever NASDAQ-listed company Microsoft had targeted for destruction was like shooting fish in a barrel.

From memory, they include but are not limited to Lotus, Netscape, Quarterdeck, Software Publishing, and Novell.

Readers with longer memories than mine are free to add to the list.

I Am Not Making This Upgood. Also please post more about how you use them and what you like. This is great info.Hi Rick,

I found out that it is PT that has a single file limit of 2GB. That is 2:03:00 at mono 24/96. I was doing a test for a live show coming up that I have to track. I just have to make sure but don't know anything off the top of my head. Gene, would probably be a great resource as I know he knows the city like the back of his hand :-).
