>If the tracks in SX are fairly hot, I would let the transfer process truncate them rather than dither. Really, dither should be the *last* step in a final master. the full 32 bit range is only useful if you have passages that almost disappear (read classical music). With busier styles of music, or higher track counts, the least significant bits are buried anyway, so
