We like our friggin cold weather up here so Global Warming is NOT an option here in Canada

DOYou know what's interesting about all this group picture stuff?

It really does change our impressions of each other. The intern on 235 patents. We won't tell you which ones, but they do, just trust us.' Then they are going to their big corporate (and maybe educational, I'm not sure) customers and saying, 'If you have linux in your server room or even if your geeks use it on their desktops, you're infringing on our patents. However, we're reasonable people and realize you might need more than one platform in your backline. So you can either move your linux servers over to our stuff or you can pay us a licensing fee to indemnify you on the patent infringement.'

The reason they're going this way is if they were to litigate, say sue Red Hat because they're publicly traded and h
