Easy test would be to disable the second monitor and reboot in single monitor mode. If PT still act that way then it would mean that how ever PT deals with graphics info does not play nice with current Nvidia cards or current video cards in general.
Are you using Dot Net Framework at all? Some video card driver functions seem t

Also do you have these hot fixes installed? They do make a performance difference on the new Dual Cores.

Here we go again, the same old dumb arguments. On a Mac you can use it for production and surf the net on the same machine with out fear. What is the cost of two PCs? This whole line of thinking does not apply to Mac users.

With a Mac there is no need to become a security administrator.

It may not be rocket science, but it is a pain in the ass. There is a better choice, but it goes against your line of work and the way you make a living.

I totally under stand why IT guys don't like Macs. Although, I do know a few IT guys that use PCs at work and Macs at home. They tell me, when they get home, the last thing they want to do is fuss with a computer.

>The amount of viruses for a Mac are minuscule in comparison to a windows machine.

There are around 150 known viruses for a Mac. Of those viruses, less than half are serious. On a PC there are over two hundred thousand viruses.

The reality for most Mac users is they don't have to worry about viruses, and they won't get a virus.

Apple has left the door open with Darwin for hackers, so there is some concern.

However it's no big deal at this time, and Apple can close the door anytime they want. Times are changing, and the word is, MS is funneling money to groups to exploit Mac OSX. You will see more articles about it, it's big news when there is a new exploit, there is big money that sees to that.

There are always going to be hackers that create computer viruses, there's no stopping that. Anything can happen in the future, but Mac users have vary little to worry about, Apple is on it.

Big Money wants people to think that Macs and PCs are the same when it comes to security and viruses, that is not even close to the truth. They just want it to appear that way.

And yes, that article is old.

OK, I must not realize the true magnitude of this, so help me out...

So far, I've got a system laid out with 17 faders with several rows of encoders and mute and solo buttons per fader, plus a separate panel of control buttons and knobs and a four line display. (It can be put on either side of the faders depending upon whether you want to work left handed or right. What more should I include? And what kind of layout do guys you prefer? Put a different way, what control buttons do you always reach fo
