>Thought about that. Already have one multiface for passing via Adat, really need to be able to pass about 20-24 tracks max. That's why the latency plug concept Chuck was talking about sounds good. Sync via ADAT on the multiface (plus 8 channels), pass the the other channels via ethernet, create a template to compensate for latency and... nah... not DJ-esk enough!!!

Now that's something special. I'd love to own one of these systems, but I think I'd be happier with a Neve Capricorn. Like me, it's 20 bit and discontinued.

I would think that it will still be better as a two box setup for me, because of the horsepower loss with Paris running (I'm running a Intel P4 with hyperthreading disabled for Paris now , XP). Might be able to get away with one if I avoid native plugs, though.

Have a Compaq pressario 2800 laptop and Quadro USB M-audio interface.
XP audio tweaked but always get some crackles in audio and in VSTI playing too.
Drivers are the latest (well from 2003) and asio latency has been tried from full latency to very low, nothing changes !
I have noticed that in Cubase SX without any direct monitoring you can record without crackles but this is like when not full duplex you might get away without crackles but in full duplex there is no way around...
Usb is 1.1
Regards,
DimitriosFor the record this is not the same John as ME the original. How about adding an initial or change your nick to John Diddy or something. hehe > DimitriosI've read DJ's posts about the scope cards and I'm giving some thought to perhaps getting a the scope "home" card. I only have one EDS card and I'm not sure if I've got this right. I'm thinking that I'd like to run the scope card on the same system as Paris (AMD Athlon 1.7 -or something like that speed, haven't got the box in front of me). I'm guessing that I'd have to get an ADAT card for Paris and route the 8 aux sends to the scope card, with the returns coming back through the same ADAT line. Scope is saying something like 3ms latency. Have I got this right? Would something like this work?

Thanks!

MRYou can also get their convertor box, the A16Ultra, and run analog ins & outs if you don't want to mess with the ADAT card (or if you have trouble finding one). The Home card may or may not be enough DSP for what you want to do, though... what are you thinking about in terms of how you'll be implementing it?

everything on my main audio box. Ableton isn't reinventing the wheel with every release these days (like they for versions 1-3) but it's definitely a 'worth the money' upgrade. A few very nice new effects, multi-processor/core support, some very nice file handling functions (the best one being 'render each individual track'), and instrum is "Do I need both?".Hi,

>My good friend and ever-patient Paris mentor Tommy Detamore recorded "Heartbreaker's Hall of Fame" for local Austin talent Sunny Sweeney a year or so ago, and it's been picked up for national release.

Sunny recently signed a deal with Big Machine Records of Nashville, responsible for charting 3 top 10 hits, including a #1, in the last year. The label apparently heard Tommy's great engineering, production, and musicianship skills, and said "What's to fix?" It goes to release in March untouched. Apparently the label sent the mixes to a well respected Nashville mastering house, and they responded with "Don't bother, I wouldn't change a thing...."

If you know much about how the Gnashville machine works, this is a pretty rare event. Way to go Tommy!!!I've got a bunch of songs to mix here. They are Cubase SX 3 projects with audio files that have lots of edits/fades, etc. these sessions also have external instrument and FX inserted in the inserts/sends and Device manager. In order for me to work with them on my system I've got two choices as I see it:

1. Render these files as individual .wav's to lose the edits and import them into a new mix template that is set up to work on my system.
2. Reconfigure each project to my ASIO configuration and go to each track and lose the insert and send FX and reconfigure/delete everything that is set up in the device manager of the old SX project. this will be very time consuming.

I've never used OMS, but this might also be an option. I just don't want any of the automation info that is written to these projects to be present. I'd much rather have them as contiguous .wav files, import them into my new mix template and start mixing each song from scratch.

I always track in Paris and then render the files to import into Cubase and I always bounce my mixes to Paris rather than rendering them in cubase because they always have external processors on the inserts and sends so I'm not just super familiar with the ITB rendering process in Cubase cause I never use it.

Is there a quick way to do this?

Thanks,

DeejCongrats to Tommy!

I tried the USB 2.0 PCMCIA adaptor route, but guess what ... It shares the same IRQ as the on board video, and the crackles get even worse!

I have a M-audio 410 for laptop use (Nuendo & Pro Tools M) and I use dedicated firewire card. In Pro Tools, I hear crackling while recording, but I adjusted my buffers, and fine. In Nuendo, no pops and clicks..very smooth at low buffer settings..

I use the export to OMF function in Nuendo/SX. Works great!! Then, import the OMF file into anything (Paris, Logic, PT, DP,)

Unfortunately, on my laptop the only buffer settings that don't cause clicking

Don't worry - everyone here knows it wasn't the same John... there wasn't near enough bitching & complaining in those posts for it to have been you.

:)DJ, I have soem URS eqs 1073 and it sound great. I herd the UAD demos online, and they sound similar. very close. I agree, Ilove what those neve 107x do to a track..sweet..

I still have not purchased a UAD card. I know I know, I'll get one. But, I have to admit, the native plugs are getting better and better..Like the Waves SSL stuff..Very very good stuff and are the URS and for PT(LE & M) teh McDSP Filter bank and Compressor bank nails those old relics pretty good.

That's why I have not gotten into the UAD stuff.
