3:50-3:54 out the piano seems too loud. Transition from :35- :40 got huge then the bottom just dropped out of the drums. That made the bass stand out too much IMO, and changing the drums to be a little more large/present would probably be the way to go. Overall I could hear everything but it seemed a little too smooth EQ wise as a whole.

You can stack up to three of them. That's 24 I/O (and unfortunately) 24 preamps that I would have to pay for that I don't really need.

But you can still be a good person and expect users of your creation to pay for your toil and dedication, unless you don't need the money :-). We all appreciate your efforts and frankly I'm impressed that skunkworks and you are still busy writing code for the platform. I just wish Edmond would wake up and start writing a new version of Paris. That would really help us out. But Paris still rocks.

Overall it's full of emotion, feeling, lightness and air, but I'm not sure if I would have used so much reverb, but that's personal. I don't think I could have created this type of a mix myself. I'd like to hang out in your studio and get some pointers :-)

If they have that, then this has truly lived up to what I hoped for from the merger. I will say this: Yamaha is overall the finest and most comprehensive large music manufacturer and their products always sound good. Since i have used Cubase from the early Atari version in '88 or '89, I am a pretty big fan of Steiny too.

BTW he did say you could cascade 3 units, and he said they are USB, not firewire.

Thanks for your kind words! This is a really new experience for me. I've used the simalog plugins for years, and I never thanked the guy who wrote those. I sent him an email this morning.

For me, I toil over them forever, and then get really excited to get them out into the world, and it's just such a letdown when after weeks of work, you get it out and there are zillion posts about other systems, politics, whatever, and a new, real-time PARIS amp plugin gets almost no comment or response. It feels like I made a huge dinner, lots of people came and ate, but almost no one thanked the cook.

Anyway, I'll just have to grow some thicker skin, I think.

Cheers,

Mike

Super nice. He even has those Eddie Van Halen tape stripes.

When I was growing up there was a wonderful Calypso band in Bermuda called the Talbot Brothers. Roy Talbot's "dog house" bass was ma

He'd just walk up and down the one string.
