--B_3269632774_1331904--The just announced version of iWorks does look interesting.

I run NeoOffice on the Mac, a version of OpenOffice with an OSX interface. It does a great job for word processing and spreadsheets. The MSWord and Excel import/export works fine when I have to deal with those proprietary formats. I've also used it to view PowerPoint presentations

It handles PDF export internally (although every app that can print can export PDF on the Mac).

Firefox and Thunderbird also run great on OSX. I prefer Thunderbird to Apple's mail program, for the most part. But I tend to use Safari more than Firefox.

I don't currently use any of the iLife apps but I'll give 'em another look when I upgrade OSX in October.

This is completely off topic but I just performed my first standup comedy set tonight. It went well, and was fun. And just to get it back to computers, I wrote most of my standup set using my Psion handheld, still a great little machine. :^)

Well, if your a Mac user, then you know that you can remove any application you don't want. As a Mac user you would also know that those applications on your drive are not much of a performance hit, if at all. You might want to do a search on how to turn dash board off though, because it launches

>Hey guys - been lurking for a long time, haven't posted in years. But I've just started working heavily with my Paris rig again, and though I've scoured the depths of the newsgroup and been through my manual cover to cover, there's one thing I can't seem to do. So I turn to you, oh wise and helpful compadres!

How do I move (or delete) a whole track in freeform mode? I had to insert some audio tracks to import all my audio, and my MIDI track got stuck as track 34 or some such. Now I want to make it track 23, and I can't seem to find any way to move or delete the track itself (not just the objects). I can certainly add another MIDI track at #23, but then I'd have this orphan MIDI track hanging out in the middle of nowhere. Granted this does nothing more than affront my slightly OCD sensibilities, but I have a hard time believing that Paris doesn't have a track move/delete function. Am I missing it?

On a side note, has anyone thought to make a package of the original Paris skin? I downloaded the new skins from the parisfaqs site, but I didn't see the original skin. I'm working on the whole skinning for the Mac bit, and I need a copy of the original BMP for comparison. If anybody has them handy, could you send them along?

Thanks!!

Matthi Martin,

Are you using the machine for gaming?

What size power supply you trying to use with that 8500 card?

They need a minimum of 700 watt to even begin to be reliable.

Are you using the current drivers for the 8500 and are you using dual monitors?

Are you using PT 7.31? If you are using anything earlier then it could be PT acting up.

It's not ignorance, some people choose to not deal with the hassle of administrating and maintaining security software. Who wants to be a security administrator?
It is a costly, time consuming PITA! I think it's an unwillingness to suck up to Microsoft and their "crappy" software.

ruth is, we are all paying for the lack of scruples of hackers. MS and Apple certainly have to, and should protect the integrity of their OSs, but inevitably, users still pay for whatever does or doesn't work in that regard (we get almost weekly security updates from Apple via OSX update manager, so it isn't a non-issue).

But, when comparing the best choice for a given user and application, viruses are hardly a main concern for those of us that just don't put ourselves in a position to be at risk (just as I don't buy stereos from guys in white vans in 7-11 parking lots...yep, seen that one :-).

Not a virus or spyware in 10 years. Two system drives destroyed by kernel panics (an OS should never crash a drive at the hardware level), a bad motherboard, and a bad combo drive,
