k-a-mole", we need to hammer it wherever it pops up, but that won't change things. What made the change is a sense of ownership.

Young man came in my office one day to apologize for being late.
Said he was in jail. Turns out he was in McDonalds late at night, just "eating while black" and a couple of Fontana cops roused him.
When he simply asked them why they were hassling him, he ended up in jail with a summons. He was so mad he was nearly shaking.
He felt beaten, and like a victim of a massive power structure that hated him for his skin color. He was set to pay the fine, but the hate from this experience was palpable in him. I said "to hell with that, don't pay a damn thing". You are an AMERICAN, you own this country as much as anyone else. Don't react to this like those racist cops expect you to. You go in dressed well, and plead "not guilty" in a loud and clear voice and explain what happened as if you expect to be exonerated. Be righteous, be strong.

The judge threw out the case and chewed out the cops.

>Don,
You missed my point. I'm not going to go into this in depth as I have better things to do, but you have to understand that there are many factors that shape peoples lives, its never as simple as both side want to make you beleive. My point was that Powell and Rice seem to take the rights simplistic view, and most blacks just feel that Bush and those who take his views have very little idea of black life in america.
They understand the concerns of the rich. I can see how they can see the poor as not getting it and in some ways they are right. Like I said there are many factors that shape peoples life. Blacks feel that Powell and Rice don't do enough to show Bush the concerns of poor. Instead they act like they grew up with them.

You makes some very good points, but life in america is not as simple as we would like it to be. Sorry I don't have the energy to go on. I wish we could come to the middle and have a little empathy for each others concerns.
