so now you're trying to put howard dean quotes attributed to me....

hahaha

you are completely out to lunch.

ael Brown, who ranks No. 1 on the list of officials who ought to be fired when the crisis has passed. Even as local officials were publicly reporting assaults, fires and bedlam at local hospitals, Brown took to the airwaves to declare that "things are going well" as mayhem engulfed the city. When asked about the rising death toll, Brown attributed it to "people who did not heed the advance warnings." Brown's smug ignorance of the conditions of the place he was tasked to save became the final door slammed on the trap that tens of thousands of the city's poorest found themselves.

The challenge for America is to remember the faces of the evacuees who will surely be ushered back into a black hole of public indifference as soon as the White House and local officials can manage it. While pledging ourselves to remember their mistreatment and fight for their cause, we should also be sure to cast a searching, skeptical eye on the money that Bush has pledged for rebuilding.

Ten billion dollars are about to pass into the sticky hands of politicians in the No. 1 and No. 3 most corrupt states in America. Worried about looting? You ain't seen nothing yet.

OK, this has degenerated into the typical name calling BS that most NG's turn to. I haven't read a single goddam thing about Paris in awhile on here.

Why don't you take your political crap over to general or find another NG to spew this shit in.

Bottom line, what are you PERSONALLY doing to help the situation?

Talk is cheap, especially political BS. Have you got evacuees in your town? Are you doing anything to help? I do and I am.

.....and I take personal offense at you calling my buddy Doug an asshole. Namecalling is the last resort of the chickenshit, so take it somewhere else or do it to someone's face instead of shooting off your mouth on a forum. I guarantee you'll have quite a different experience.

dammit dude, chill out and actually do something to help. This political tirade crap is tiresome. We all bleed red. This is about humanity, not politics.
