I don't murder because I don't want to be murdered. I don't steal because I don't want to be stolen from. I don't lie because I don't want to be lied to. And so on. I have faith that most human beings have an innate sense of "goodness," but I believe in laws just so a society has written agreement on what behaviour is unacceptable. That way, we're protected against those who may be out of touch with their own personal "sense of goodness." I do believe, though, that the worst among us are basically good underneath their rage and pain.

I watched an HBO documentary the other night called, "The Iceman and the Psychi

Their fear of reason can only lead the world to disaster.A Chip That Can Transfer Data Using Laser Light

By JOHN MARKOFF

Published: September 18, 2006

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 17 - Researchers plan to announce on Monday that they have created a silicon-based chip that can produce laser beams. The advance will make it possible to use laser light rather than wires to send data between chips, removing the most significant bottleneck in computer design.

The development is a result of research at Intel, the world's largest chip maker, and the University of California, Santa Barbara. Commercializing the new technology may not happen before the end of the decade, but the prospect of being able to place hundreds or thousands of data-carrying light beams on standard industry chips is certain to shake up both the communications and computer industries.

Don't take my comments as an indication that I have no "faith" in a higher power, but couldn't our ability to feel empathy be one possible reason that the majority of people might have similar morals. I don't think an atheist knows murder is wrong just because god said "thou shalt not kill". I think the golden rule has a lot to do with it. Over time, we have learned as empa
