in every key of course, this is a must, learned all the chord scales, in triads, sevenths, and 4th patterns, especially the dominant ones, (they're more complex and were harder to hear for me), Altered, Diminished, Harmonic Minor, Melodic Minor, etc., it's endless my friend. It's all repetition in the beginning, but eventually you begin to find your own voice and things start to fall into place. It only took me about 25 years :0 and I'm still searching and analyzing other's solos. I play the sax and recently the steel drum which has made me more aware of comping. Keyboard is challenging in that you comp and solo simultaneously. If you want to do this on piano, you're on the right footing already if you're listening to cats like Bill Evans, Oscar Peterson, Chick, Herbie, George Shearing, etc... Transcribe and shed like hell.

Cheers and good luck,
Rich
