h nuance.

It's a really bad idea when you have a small stage and a drummer right behind her. Picks up everything around her. I personally will never touch another 87a for a typical club date... feedback and bleed aren't worth it. Gimme a larger stage or a solo/jazz gig and we'll talk. Take this advice with the fact that I use about 7000w on the mains in clubs, understanding relation to your situation.

If she's used to the sound/pattern of a N/D 257, the Beta 58 will be your best choice for least learning curve anyway. And unlike a standard 58, the Beta won't pick up everything within 15 cardioid feet of her.

Any time you guys want to hit Denver, eat Thai food, tour studios and talk shop again, give me a yell. That was fun!

It was good to see El Miguel, Rohde and John, too. John, I look forward to checking out your new/restored studio in a few weeks.

Cheers,
