1.) If you're poor in this country, you get free healthcare... period. Yeah it sucks that you have to sit in an ER waiting room to get it, but said poor person also doesn't get $5k's worth of bills like us "rich" people do when their daughter has to go in for an appendectomy, or tonsilectomy, or knee surgery from a volleyball injury (yeah it's one of those sports us "rich" people get their girls into in school - you know, the ones where us "rich" people have to pay for uniforms & separate sports insurance & stuff, while the "poor" people get those fees waived... another way of saying "you 'rich' people are paying for the poor people's kid's uniforms, too" What - you think the school district absorbed those costs? LOL!!!). So even though I've been fortunate enough to have decent insurance, I've also paid into a LOT of deductible's & "20% patient portions" over the years, too. Is it better than no insurance at all? Yes, I will admit that it is. Is it cheaper than being able to get free healthcare if you go into an ER as a person who has no ability to pay? FUCK No!

This has no boundary - you can be black, white, asian, hispanic, paisley... just because you cannot pay, a hospital cannot deny you essential care.

2.1) I know of no "United White Persons College Fund", or "Chevron White Persons College Scholarship Program", or any type of government or corporate charitable tuition-related assistance available to anyone other than a.) those that can demonstrate true need, and b.) Those for African-Americans & Hispanics & maybe a scant few for Asians.

2.2) I also know of NO government-mandated programs that audit businesses to make sure they have an adequate amount of white folk working for them. This all means that the educational & employment opportunities for minorities are vastly superior to those available to "non-minorities" (essentially: "anyone who is white"). So why are you playing the race card?

And don't play the "400 years of oppression!" thing at me, either, because if it wasn't for your own brethren in the Ivory Coast kidnapping & selling your ancestors off to whomever wanted to buy them, there wouldn't have been a slave trade to begin with.

Man - really getting tired of being blamed for every fucking evil in the western hemisphere!!!

I used to own Waves. Then when win XP came out, they tried to ding me for $300.00 to upgrade my software. I don't use Waves any more and will NEVER get involved with their ridiculous WUP.

Our place sits literally at the base of the San Juan mountains so it achieves a decent balance of temperatures....90's during the day and 50's at night.. 10 minutes to the north and you're at 9000+ feet and it's about 60 degrees during the heat of the day. 20 minutes to the south and you're in the high desert with no humidity,.wind blowing dust devils around and temperatures of 100+ degrees. You have to be careful. It's not like the heat you experience in the coastal areas where you sweat. Here' you just dry up before you're even aware that it's happening and when you start getting dizzy for no apparent reason, you'd better have some water handy. Most of my time recently has been "desert time". I feel like a crispy critter when I get home. There isn't enough skin moisturizer or water on earth to alleviate this feeling at this time of year and the last thing I feel like doing is working in the studio. I'm spent and have been going to bed around 9:30 PM so I can get up around 5:00 AM and head down to the area where I've been working before the winds kick up and suck the life out of me. I like to get home early afternoon. Hopefully the monsoon season will start around the middle of July. It's been pretty predictable/consistent the last couple of years. I spent summers in Boulder, and I remember that weird 'I'm dehydrated but not sweating' thing.

Not a problem in CT right now. It's pushing 90 with dew points above 70, or in other words kind of like walking through hot, sticky goop. And I have an office softball game tonight. Whoo hooo!

chrisl@adkproaudio.com A friend of mine uses one of these and I had a little time on it a while back and thought it was at least "OK" and I see used ones fetch "almost new" prices in the rare event that they become available on EBay so when given the opportunity to trade a piece of gear that was little used for one of these, I bit.

<http://www.aybg12.dsl.pipex.com/>

I played around with it some last night. I must say that I'm impressed. Very transparent Class "A" pre with a smooth/transparent compressor and expander. It's got up to 70dB of gain so it's a nice choice for old ribbon mics and the expander works in such a natural way that, if tweaked properly, you can basically gate the self-noise right out of a mic circuit without chatter or unnatural decay characteristic.

Also, the top of this unit could be used as a hot plate for eggs ' hash browns. Even with the ventilation holes in the top, depending on what was racked above it, I might want more than 1U rack space above. It could probably heat a small apartment in the winter.

I give this piece a thumbs up so far.

DeejDavid,

Do you mean terminate both the input with a "T" and the output?

This works for XP SP11 with no problems. We have it. We use it. there is another utility program that allows PC's to read Mac discs.....I can't remember the name right off the top of my head. Don't go there. We did. It sucks so bad that the tech support for that product actually recommended us to use Macdrive 6. We are using it to read an OS 9.2.2 disk.

Good luck.

WayneJust run a straight feed from the BB to the MEC input. You don't need a "T" for the MEC input. Use a 75ohm terminator cap on the MEC out.

Your tiredness can largely be caused by the lack. Headaches and other symptoms also go away right after taking the stuff.

Hot here too - and it ain't a dry heat. FLA.

I bought a 16 channel API console back in the "90s and parted it out, keeping a bunch of stuff for my studio. I love the pres and the 560, but I was not wowed by the comps I got (they were smaller than the 2500 and mono) or the 550a. I actually preferred the EQ on my TAC Matchless console.

I too don't do Waves ever since the ME to XP scam.

r more. Sense AMD is 8 times smaller than Intel it is easy for Intel to loose some money to gain more market share. Even we were forced by Intel drastic moves and having AMD hot a brick wall in development for a while. We had been a AMD only shop for at least years before that. Now we sell nothing but Intel. There is nothing by AMD worth selling at this point. Hopefully this will help give AMD a kick up so they can survive Intel's onslaught. If AMD is finally able get the new multi-core technology they have out of the lab you will see many people going back to them. I bet Apple will be the first one.

rom ebay.

In fact, I think I have one of these and will have to dig through the garage.
Bought it long time ago and never found a use for it.

Anyway, thanks for all the suggestions.... ~ Ed

What's scary is that 'userland' code should be able to exploit some of these.
Bad bad bad.
