fed them like some internet CD sales sites do, they're already remastering them for their
"radio" program, so what more would it take to do entire concerts and sell them? Say with the actual poster in miniature on the cover, band promo shot, set list, band personnel, etc. (Man, look at what they're asking for vintage posters!) I really hope they start doing this, since you're absolutely right about the nice sound quality. Very impressive. I sure buy some.

Again, thanks for the post.

<http://www.polesoft.com/refer.html> track to Paris clocked to a Lucid GenX6 word clock. I have Mytek and RME converters. I don't think they sound any better really, just different. I use Cubase SX and Paris both when mixing.....Cubase for the editing/processing features, then I lightpipe the tracks to Paris for summing. It's pretty complicated, but it works well. The Digi 002 is a nice system as well and will get you into a compatibility scenario with most professional studios which use Pro Tools HD, at least for now.

What exactly does monitoring in mono mean?

Is it panning many stereo instruments to center and listening to the mix from a pair of stereo speakers?

OR

Summing a stereo mix together and listening to the mix thru one speaker directly in front of you?

How does one go about checking there mix in mono from within PARIS? =
(QUICKLY)

How about the same question , but from within Cubase?

Thanks!!!!!!!!!!

Almost too good to be true.

DJI too switched from Paris to Logic Pro on Mac OS-X for many of the the same reasons as Jamie listed. Improved workflow and improved functionality (midi,
