>>Don't know what books you are reading but the tower of babel isn't about different gods. It was about the power of agreement. All those people were in agreement to build a tower that would reach Heaven. Wasn't Gods plan for getting to Heaven. So He had to do something to break their wrong motives and broke their native tongue up into different languages so that they couldn't understand each other and the tower stopped. So when you hear about someone who is just "babelling" on about something, you'll know where the term came from. Babelling never makes any sense does it? But don't take my word for it... Take His. Check out the Word.

see, now that's where i think the problem lies. god should know that we're not going to get the message as he wants us to because we're human and will translate anything to our own advantage. of all the things to deserve eternal damnation for (if you believe in it) one would think that the inability to "get it" would not be one of them.

would you as a parent condemn your child to a never ending life of torment simply because he or she couldn't understand the totality of you being "the creator (parent)" of them. you know, it can take only one gene to make someone either a murderer, saint and everything in between. so to me a loving, just and forgiving god would have a better plan then eternal suffering. we on the other hand are more than willing to threaten and enact all levels of retribution on others because we think that's what god would do.
