people not being able to see the home page menu. It requires the latest version of Flash and should download automatically, but may require coming back to the site again to play. It is a self-designed site and I am trying to reslove these issues before promoting it. Thanks again.

Just finished a nearly all-day track replacement session for the live album I am in the middle of.

I still love this system. With careful mixing and use of processors you can still do just stellar work with PARIS. Everyone loves the sound.

This should be done in a few more weeks and I should be able to post some samples.

I'm stickin' with PARIS.

>>Hey Don,

I'm with you. You know, I've heard folks comment on how easy it is to mix in Paris. One reason is clearly the fact that the sonics are so good. But I think the other may be the LACK of all kinds of features and options. I'm not knockin' features, or their ultimate utility in music making, but the limitations of the Paris seem to help me (force me) to stay focused on the tones.

My impression has been that AMD initially got market share by selling relatively quick chips at a lower price than Intel. If Intel beats them at the architecture game (for awhile) and AMD refines a proven technology, I wonder if AMD can beat 'em at the checkout once again?
