see that there were no dead/stuck pixels so we're good to go on time

Many thanks again to all who assisted

 >Hey,

Been busily adding old Led Z to my iPod, and it reminded me of something I noticed back when I first bought LZ III. Did anyone else notice a change in Robert Plant's voice between II and III? I was noticing how full and throaty his high notes are on the first two albums, like on "Communication Breakdown" and "The Lemon Song," and it seems like starting on III his high range got kind of squeaky and falsetto-ish. Did he fry his throat a bit on their early tours? Was the real Robert Plant replaced by an alien? Am I just imagining the whole thing?

Stay tuned for these and other terribly important questions on the next episode of How Sarah Wastes Her Precious Spare Time.

His voice on Immigrant Song wails just like the early stuff right?I know this won't make me popular, but that's the kind of loser humor that just seems dumb if you don't get high. You could substitute "stupid as fuck" and the song would mean about the same thing. Probably the same people would think it was funny, too.

Not to be all holier than thou, but I haven't gotten high since the winter of '75, and I am a much better and
