ed my studio mains - a pair of vintage a/d/s L1290 speakers into the theater and added a center and 3 surround speakers from a manufacturer called Fluance. Finally I picked up a used 15" 200W subwoofer from someone at work to fill the room with BOOM!

My amp is a Yamaha 6.1 AV receiver which puts out about 100W per channel and has some interesting ambience settings to play around with. The final piece I picked up is a Zenith DVD player. It is an older model, but well known on the internet as "customizable", in particular to allow 1080i upconversion thru the DVI connector to the projector.

The bottom line is this setup is fantastic for us. We have movie nights where we get pizza or whatever, and watch a movie on the big screen. It makes watching movies a special experience, but we still have the regular TV to watch our usual shows. And for those special TV shows, I can broadcast TV thru the projector too. Football looks pretty cool this way, I do say.

I would not recommend the projector for day-in day-out TV viewing since the bulbs are not cheap, but if you really want to make viewing movies special, this is t
