If you're tackling the IRQ assignment glitches in the PSCL, and everything depends upon the PSCL - do you think this could also have a global positive effect on PARIS' IRQ twitchiness overall?

I've just been looking at the Scherzo and I'm certain I know what has been happening. There is function that is called when the hardware interrupts called an ISR. It does the following:
1) read what the interupt state is.
2) set the interupt state to mas ked (ignore).

3) Calls a delayer procedure call that runs later and actually does the work and resets the mask to how the ISR found it.
4) returns

This is a really clean, quick, efficient ISR. I don't think there is anything wrong with it. I suspect that PARIS is just sensitive to other badly written ISRs because it needs to work in real time.

The problem on a Multi-processor machine is that two interrupts can be called on two CPUs at the same time, or slightly different times.

A second call can come in a little after a first call and, to make a long story short, when it checks to see what the IRQ state is, it records that it is masked (off) because the other ISR just masked it. The 1st one finishes and restores the IRQs to unmasked (good). When the second one finishes, it restores the IRQ mask to how it found it, which is masked. From then on, there are no more samples requested by the card.

The version of the PSCL I just posted works around this because when this happens (which is rare), it just unmasks the Interrupt.

It should work fine until I can fix the Scherzo.

So cool!
