>Hi Terry,

My current franken-puter is one that I am most proud of. I wanted a modern PC that could run Windows 98 and Windows XP with PARIS. The AM2NF3 was the only AM2 board I could find that looked like it would do the trick, but it explicitly said that it didn't support Windows 98.

I bought it anyway, and made it work.

I use Windows 98 for testing plugins and using the ADAT card with my LX 20.
I use XP for everything else.

Things to note about the AM2NF3:

The ide cables are in the way of full length PCI cards on all but the bottom

2 slots. I use a magma, so it doesn't affect me. IDE cables that have low profile connectors may alleviate this, I don't know.

Windows 98 will not work with Nvidia agp cards on this board. I don't know why. I tried everything I could think of to get a 6200 and a 6800 to work without any success. I've got a G550 working fine right now. My G400 worked, too.

You have to disable the built in audio under windows 98. There are no drivers for it.

Getting 98 into safe mode requires a trick when you've got more than 1GB or ram. you have to add a line to the system.sb file, I think.

IDE drives bigger than 120 GB require a third party driver. I'd have to look up his site. Rudolph Lowe, I believe.

SATA drives bigger than 120 GB will not work in Windows 98 no matter what. I had to disable the port in the 98 driver to get it to ignore the larger drive.

You need to scavenge the USB 98 drivers from other MB makers. I can send you these if you need them.

You need to limit the RAM available in Windows 98 using MSConfig to 512 MB or all hell breaks loose.

As for availability, it's been discontinued. I've been keeping my eyes on ebay for a spare in case mine dies. I got my first one by ordering it from a British website. It was never sold in North America. The shipping cost sucked.

I hope this helps!

There's technology that could make that a possibility now. That could be the best of both worlds, to my way of thinking.

>I'd ideally like to see the current setup stay, but with additions. I'm not adverse to alternatives, and a wider Paris community that's not simply revolving around this single portal. There's heaps of websites dedicated to C64. I don't think we can probably generate loads more chat simply from better technology, but there has long been talk that the web interface isn't a fave with some. The main thing holding back change has been:

(*) Many prefer NNTP, which I understand and appreciate, and there are few options which do both NNTP and web.

(*) Some prefer this interface.

If we can find an app which has a better web gui but also NNTP support and is free, we can hang it off this group. People can continue to use this portal if they wish, via either web or NNTP, while some could hang off the mirror site, via either the new web gui or NNTP. Posts would transfer automatically between the two and, depending upon the configuration, probably could be up on both groups seconds after the post was made. Hence we'd have everything we currently have, as well as a new web GUI and a second server offsite. If a server goes down you simply use the other URL. Indeed we could set it up so that there are multiple IP resolutions on the group URL and hence your machine would switch servers automatically if one server went offline.

Indeed you could even do that with the web interfaces. You'd have two URL's, one for each, but if the IP couldn't be resolved it would just point you at the other server. Hence NNTP users wouldn't even know if a BOX went down, and web users would simply be automatically switched to their non-preferred web GUI if their preferred GUI went offline.

(*) No Interruption of service

(*) Complete backup of posts if either server goes down

(*) Two web and two NNTP hosts to choose from

(*) Automatic transfer of posts between all access points within seconds.

This is all if we can find the right software, but the stuff we're currently running can do most of this on its own so long as we find something which has both a better web gui as well as NNTP support.

Then we simply need a host. There are options. We could rent a machine somewhere which is maintained, as that can be cheapish. Or somebody, perhaps Kerry, might have access to a host machine. Also, I have a backup machine here already which could be reloaded with different software and possibly do all we're looking at here, but we'd still only have a single internet connection.

But this thread, in fact, was started to talk about simply changing the titles on some of the group headings to better represent their usage so that people know what to expect and where to go for tech support if that's all they want.

Cheers,
Kim.

Hey you guys, don't read every post here.
There's no time for that.

Neil take it easy and stop in once in a while
