

---

Subject: OT: An interesting paradox - Islam and the Pope
Posted by Dedric Terry on Sat, 16 Sep 2006 22:48:09 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

do you desire?

>
>>What, exactly, do you find missing? What part of the current audio track >>editing or waveform editing don't you like?
>
>>
>>Regarding MSWindows - I understand that's an issue for some folks >>(particularly those who didn't switch when Logic went OSX-only), but >>really, this is not an issue for everyone. It's kinda late in the game >>to still be complaining about that, either switch to OSX (a very good >>OS) or give up on Logic and know that just because you gave up doesn't >>mean it hasn't improved tremendously and people aren't using and liking

>
>>the current version - it's a much better program on OSX today than it >>was on MSWindows four years ago, or however long it's been. For that >>matter it's a much better program on OSX today than it was on MacOS 9.

>>I'm no fan of either OS 9 or MSWindows for my own OS snob reasons, but >>OSX doesn't suck too badly (high compliment).

>>
>>At this point I'm OK with seeing the development team continue to >>optimize Logic for OSX as they continue to rewrite and update code. If >>there's a problem I can complain to a single company to fix it - as I >>did when the Apple rep came to town earlier this year. Whether that had >>anything to do with it or not, the bugs I complained about got fixed.

>
>>
>>I would like to see Emapple continue the process of moving things from >>the Environment and into the Arrange window. The manual control in the >>Environment is powerful, but

---