Give me a reason to care what European writers think.

Tell me why you care in particular.

The last election went the way it did, not because Bush was wrong, stupid, or evil, but because he does not know how to lead, and there may be no solution in the Middle East at any rate. Years ago, we could have started a crash program to get our own oil resources and develop alternatives but no, we blew it just like we blew all the chances to get OBL.

Now we will pay for ALL the stupidity of both sides.

I know you h

For my purposes, just the simplicity/intuitiveness of the routing capabilities of this platform would have made it worth the switch.

hen I've got two issues at hand:
1.) If I'm going to use the Pulsar card in the input chain, then I'm going to be limited to ten tracks max on input at my 88.2k sample rate (I got the "Plus" i/o option so I could have balanced ins & outs, which gives you two analog ins, two ADAT/Optical in's - which are good for 4 channels each at that sample rate - and 2 AES in's, but I don't have anything with AES outs except for my Mucusrite ISA 428 with the digicard option - and I don't know if you can use the AES & lightpipe outs at the same time... anyway, maybe I'll be able to get 12 channels of input out of the system; ten for sure. We'll see.

In any event, that's a step back from my current 16 analog ins (with my two Multifaces) plus 4 channels of digilight (using the ISA card). Not a problem for most of the stuff I do, but getting another full RAWK band in here, 10 or 12 in's might not be enough for basic trax.

2.) The second issue I'll be dealing with by keeping the RME convertors can be summed up in this simple phrase:

TWO ASIO DRIVERS... need I say more?

Well, we'll see how that goes, as well... maybe I can still use the Multifaces & their own drivers for tracking, enabling me to have all the inputs I need & not worry about interfacing the Multifaces with the Pulsar card, and then release those drivers for mixdown & incorporate the Pulsar Card at that point.... not sure how well that'll work, but I guess I'm gonna try it.

In any event, I've just been messing with the Paris summing thing right now. Got Paris up & running first time & everything's working fine... had some routing problems with my RME's, though... for some odd reason I no longer have Output #4! Switched the two Multifaces around, swapped out PCI cards & even PCI slots, still nothing... it's showing up as "active" and "visible" in the 'Device Setup' menu, too; but no matter what configuration I try, I just simply do not have Analog Out #4 any more... weird. I don't know when this might have happened, because I haven't needed to use that before.

If anyone can give me a hint as to what I might try, I'd appreciate it!

In any event, I'm using 4 sets of stereo analog outs, going into the Paris 8-in module, and monitoring off the MEC... what do I think so far? Well, there's definitely a difference vs. mixing ITB on a 2-buss Native mix, as I suspected there would be. Does it sound better than a straight 2-buss Native mix? Yeah, I think so in a way... I'm definitely losing some high end, but it sounds bigger - won't be able to tell for sure until I a/b them, but those are my initial impressions. To me it sounds much like what you'd get if you stemmed out four or five stereo submixes in SX, then re-which is which, but here's what the procedures were:

-For the straight-ahead 2-bus Native Mix, it was basically just as I've been saying in recent threads with regard to managing levels, nothing special. Dithered down to a 16-bit wav file @ 44.1k in SX using the UV22HR dither plugin. Done.

-For the Native Stems mix, it was the exact same mix as above, but I just ran out the following stere

ine. I believe it works on 95 (if you really want to!), 98, WIn2000, and XP (all versions).

I didn't suggest this because of the annoyance if for some reason the software doesn't allow access. You have to go through the hassle of hooking the keyboard video and mouse back up to determine the issue. With the KVM switch, most of them use a hotkey combination (i.e. ctrl ctrl Enter)

Hope this helps.
