Tom,

After you have edited your Pairs .cfg file to add the line =
"UseHouseSync=3D1" (no quotes), save this and reboot your computer.

1. Get the 442 completely out of the equation. Forget about using it = ever again in a multiscard setup. It's just going to make your life = miserable.

2. Connect the three MECs to the Lucid clock outputs with cables of = equal length, connect the MEC on card A to clock output #1, Mec on card = B to output #2, etc.....I don't know why, but this is what worked = for me.....then ((very important) set the Lucid clock to 44.1KHz = sample rate (if that's what you're using)

3. Boot Paris from the Paris.exe in the C:\Program files\EMU\Paris =
folder

4. Set the project to 48KHz and save it back to the same folder under = the name "Default Project" (no quotes).

5. Save it again to the desktop under the same name.

6. Reboot your computer and launch Paris from the icon on your = desktop. Do not ever change the sample rate of your Default Project. = Leave it at 48KHz. You will be able to open all of your old 44.1 = projects or create new 44.1 projects from this one once Paris has booted = and fully initialized.

I was more stable than ever before with Lucid WC, 2 MECs and one 442. Never crashed once. I added a third MEC and that was okay but it's in/outs weren't functional. I tried it in a different position and ever since then I get this after Paris has gotten to the EDS/DX effects part of the start up.

Unhandled Exception:c00000005
at address: 77c35ea

I tried removing the last MEC and putting it in the last working = position.

All I get is this error and can't boot up Paris.

Last working configuration:
Submix A MEC
Submix B 442
Submix C MEC (no working audio)
Submix E MEC

I tried swapping hardware between Submix B and C and that's when the = trouble began.

I also reseated the eds cards and their cables.

Is it possible it's an effect? I have added nothing new in months = and it was very stable.

Maybe a defective default project?

I'll try another one to boot from that happens to be at 48k.

Tips graciously accepted,
Tom

like all gearheads we started talking about gear. I was thinking to myself what a nice guy this was and how knowledgeable he was about many things, a refreshing turn of events after the wanker I've been dealing with on "that other issue". He asked me what kind of console I was using and I told him that I used a rack full of preamps, but I had more forsell circuitry in there than any other kind. He said "Hey!!! I know Fred". Well, turns out I was talking to Dale Epperson of Old School Audio. I've heard nothing but praise concerning his product. We talked some more. I told him that I was afraid to buy a lunchbox because if I did, I would have to fill it up within 30 days and then buy another one. We had a good laugh. Very nice guy.

It's a small world (it might be about the size of a lunchbox....who knows?)

The audio world is indeed a small one - at least in our little working corner of it. Between just the folks on this small newsgroup

I'm not in the mood, I can hardly stand it. One thing I really like about classic rock is, it was real musicianship.

The band Boston took rock to a new level at the time. The songs, the playing, the sound, the production and the way that music was recorded were all notable at the time. Rockin' organ, Boston's incorporation of the Hammond B3 organ in rock at the time was also notable. Also, the concepts and the art work on the album covers for Boston and Steve Miller were exceptional at the time.
I think Boston really did want to take us to a new place musically.

If you don't care for Boston or Steve Miller that's cool. If you th

That only works when the capsules are dirty and only for a little while. Usually on vocal mics from dried spit and food that has built up on the diaphragm and is causing it to short when the humidity goes up. DJ's mics actually have a broken pin on the capsule.

suggest it, why not any of us who are promoting something post our websites to the group, so we can all raise our rankings and increase clicks. This is really a case where there is strength in numbers and every one who adds your site to theirs makes yours and secondarily those you link a little bigger in reach.

many others. At least it was not the big wow factor for me. Maybe because I came to Paris from a pretty hip analog system. I do think it was ahead of its time in affordable digital sound quality and power of features. And has the best news group around by far.

I use SX4 and Sam now.

> Brad Lyons-SweetwaterBefore I met you guys, I was soooo ungeeklike. I mean, all I wanted to do was show up at an unplugged gig and plug in guitar DI to a PA that someone else had set up. I would look at the rack of gear and the mass of cabling and think "man, I'm glad I don't have to deal with that crap". I would turn on a computer and not * with it. If it was acting wierd , I would send it to Dell or Apple.

Well.....last night, my 220v GC-8, which is a proprietary remote control for at 220v Roland R-880, died. Well, I hooked up another one that I had bought on EBay for just such an occasion and it and I don't even want to go into the insanity that happened next, but I ended up stiing down with the 2" thick manual and reprogramming a buch of stuff on the damn thing and now it works. I know, I know..that's what 2" thick manuals are for...right? It's just so out of character for me. I used to be soooo right brained. My head didn't even explode when I sat down and did this, though I did spend a few anxious moments when I resigned myself to the RTFM last night and sat up until about 3:00 AM getting my head around military Rolandspeak.
Jeeezzzz.....after dealing with the cryptic reduncdancy of this manual, I could probaly get a job as an artilleryman in the Royal Marines. In a former life, I would have jumped up and down on it until it was in pieces and then thrown it out the window and gone for a jog or something.....(sigh)

I mean, this is only a brief example of the stuff I find myself doing on a regular basis nowadays. I no longer bear any resemblance at all to my former self or just about any "normal" person I know.

OK...rant off.....Thad,

I liked your post. From here on out if ever forced at gunpoint to share my views on the music of the band known as 'Boston', I will use your description.

High CPU, pain to download and install, convoluted web site, but I love this plug.

Anyone else?

Genel tried the Neb2Free version - can't figure it out.

Oh, wait. There already is one.

Never mind.

pabyou guys are amazing. Thanks for the photo, mark!

I'd honestly never heard the name. But then, I'm not from the world of professional audio like you guys are.

Thanks, all!

-----=_NextPart_000_00C5_01C7C2EC.D905B9D0--If he is willing to just dig in a little he will probably love it. It's a very popular program and basic tracking should not be too hard. Otherwise, maybe Cakewalk Sonar.Hi Gantt, None of them are simple!! :) If he a PC guy then I would recommend Reaper if his main needs are audio recording.

It's really cheap and really powerful if he decides to get under the hood of the program. They have a very helpful forum and a good manual.

It will work fine with the Tone port.

chrisl@adkproaudio.com I use a blue and white G3, but it is limited to 2 cards.

Here's why:

The boot drive in those is pretty primitive and there are no drives that will drop in to replace it because of the issue with transfer speed in that computer. Basically, the computer has a max transfer speed from the drive (ATA 66 I think) and if you put a modern drive in there, the computer sets the drive to

"max output speed" on boot and then the computer cannot address the drive any more. grrrrr...

A Sonnet host card solve the problem

<http://www.sonnettech.com/>

but takes up a card slot. So you are limited to 2 EDS cards. Even the G4's (and some will boot OS9 and some will not) run a lot better with a host card and a modern drive.

Can you live with 2 cards?

I have not tried a Magma with a G3 but that could be another solution.

best

They may have an SATA host card for G3s over at Sonnet.

Also, blue and white G3's are cheap. I got one for my kid on ebay for 230.00
