thanks for the insightful input on the israel topic and the thoughts on force vs deescalation politics.
no, wait...

btw, that discussion is (or, since everybody avoids it, "would") even more interesting because each side also believes it was them who solved the cold war conflict (since you brought it up).

was it ronald reagan? was it gorbatchov? or was it maybe the politics of ongoing dialogue from willy brandt in the 70s?
was it a little of everything? or was it all obsolete and the only reason the cold war ended was because the communism as a whole failed?

it could be an interesting discussion. at least more interesting than theorizing about whether "the euros got more cocky" or something. but to each his own.

but in case im wrong and your would find it interesting too, heres again the first statement i made about israel and force vs deescalation, inspired by your "nuke islam cities" suggestions.

israel has been trying this method for quite a while,
just on a smaller scale. did it reduce terror over there? you tell me.

OTOH, there was this one time when they tried the deescalation method for a change. did it reduce terror? you bet it did.

too bad that some extremist religious fanatic asshole shot the man that was brave enough to try this. theyve been back to business as usual ever since (and its not working Personally I think it was a combination of all those things.

My point about the Soviet tanks was that - regardless of how the end of the Cold War came about - it was American forces sitting a few yards away from the East German tower in that picture which prevented said tanks from rolling through there on any given Sunday afternoon. Ever since you guys don't need us anymore, it's been pretty much: "Fuck the Americans".

I think even you would admit that the place in that photo looks

You're welcome.

I'll talk with you about Israel some other time.

Well, of COURSE! What do you expect? You think someone's going to build some really cool blow-up-the-world sort of thingie & NOT want to use it?

I think the thing that can best illustrate what happens when we mess around with weapons we can't control is this portion of a script from "South Park":

begin paste Butters: Enough! Uh I grow weary of your foolishness. Professor Chaos cannot be stopped!
Stan: Oh yeah?! Kenny! Use your ninja star!
Kenny: (Yeah! Take this, Professor Chaos!) [shows off an eight-pointed shuriken] (Feel my wrath!) [unleashes the shuriken, and it strikes Butters in the eye.
Butters' helmet flies off, revealing his mohawk and the shuriken embedded in the bloody left eye. The music abruptly stops and the boys are shown in regular form. Butters looks at the boys and bawls] Cartman: Oh, fuck dude!
Stan: [he and Kyle rush over to Butters] It's Butters. Oh my God! [the boys gather round Butters] Oh, dude! It's stuck in his eye!
Kyle: What the hell did you do that for, Kenny?!
Kenny: (I just threw it like Stan asked me.)
Butters: It hurts! It hurts! [continues bawling] Kyle: Oh man! We are in serious trouble!
Stan: [tries to soothe Butters] Ssh sshhhh. It's okay, Butters. Calm down.
It's not that bad, really.
Butters: [trying to catch his breath] But I... But I... But I can't see nothin'.
I gotta go to the hospitalll!! [Stan looks around nervously, with gritted teeth]
Stan: Okay okay, calm down, Butters! It'll be okay! [Butters composes himself and sobs softly, looking around from time to time for any sign of help]

Cartman: Guys, meeting over here for a second? [the boys move off and huddle] All right you guys, we need to stay calm and just do the right thing. We have to kill Butters and bury him in Kyle's backyard.

Stan: Dude, shut up!
Kyle: I agree with Cartman!
Stan: What??
Kyle: You don't understand what my mom will do to me if she finds out I was playing with weapons!
[a closeup of the shuriken lodged in Butters' left eye, moments later. Some pliers clamp on to it and the camera pulls back. Stan is holding the pliers and he tugs gently at the shuriken. Butters sits on a tree stump] Stan: Just stay still, Butters.
Butters: [Stan tugs again] Hwa. [Stan tugs harder] Hwa! [Stan tugs even harder] Hwaaaaa!
Kyle: Stop dude! You're gonna scramble his brain!
Cartman: Go ahead and scramble it, then he won't remember it was us.
Butters: You guys can't fix my eyeball! You have to take me to the hospital! [whimpers] Kyle: If we take him to the hospital, they're gonna find out what happened.

Stan: God-damnit!
Kyle: [moves off] God? Please, if you get me out of this, I swear, I will never play with weapons ever again.
Cartman: [approaches] Don't be so quick to throw off your ninja responsibility, Kyle. [to the huddle] Now, come on guys, sure, it's easy to be a ninja when everything's going your way, but it's times like these, when the chips are down, that a ninja shows his true character.
Butters: Whoa, I'm getting woozy.
Cartman: Shut up, Butters. [to the other boys] Now, there's a way out of this. We just have to use our... ninja reasoning. [puts his fingertipss to his temples. Kenny touches his right temple, Stan his chin] Stan: We... need a doctor... But we can't go to the hospital. Wait a minute. Wait, wait, wait what about the veterinarian?
Cartman: Dr. Shafley?
Stan: He's really old and and goin blind.
Cartman: So if we make Butters up to look like a dog,... end paste

Derek, I have to call you on this statement. You call nuking cities and Israel both examples of brute force. This is irrational, and I am surprised that you said it.

Given what they could do, Israel has shown amazing restraint in dealing with terrorism. They could have turned the palestinians into green glass by now, and instead have given them 95% of everything that they asked for in the negotiations under Clinton.

The reason Clinton failed at making peace was not brutality, nor warlikeness, it was the palestianian and arab's clear intent to wipe out israel and kill every single israeli.

If the palestinians want peace, they could have it at any time, but they do not, despite the fact that palestianians in Israel have more rights, more income, more personal dignity than they do in any other country in the middle east. It is hate, pure and simple.

If that hate and brutality was equal on the Israeli and US side, you would have seen Damascus, Tehran, and Baghad turned into radioactive holes in the ground by now, and a clear threat of more should any more terrorist acts be committed. As Neil says, this is not a joke, and remains an option should we be placed under serious, sustained attack. I pray to God that it does not come to that, but we will not live under a Mullah. Will you?

How in hell do you de-escalate when dealing with 10th century lunatics who will kill children to get on the news? Well you don't, and even the best and brightest have failed at it.

You don't negotiate. You kill them. then you kill those other ones, and them, and those guys too, and you do it, as carefully as possible, until the survivors want peace.

If you say this doesn't work, you are not being honest. If you try to negotiate with terrorists you are a fool. If you try to understand their acts, you tilt on the edge of moral bankrupty.

Peace starts with the desire for peace on both sides.

interesting. too bad you dont follow up on this.

> Ever since you guys don't need us anymore,
>it's been pretty much: "Fuck the Americans".

a convenient fantasy, but of course completely wrong. germany has followed US politics almost 100% until the second iraq war. as we speak, germany is among the biggest supporters of your forces in afghanistan. first iraq war, serbien, bosnien, albanien (dont know the english term for these nations), you name it, germany was there, usually sending lots of its ridiculous, mostly defensive military forces, but also being the biggest payer of all supporters to make up for that.

this support, as well as public opinion on the US as a whole, has been more or less constant all these years. the shift (both in politics as well as in public opinion) is directly connected to the second iraq war. you can search and find a lot of polls about that on www.spiegel.de (unfortunately in german, but i guess you could also google for english versions of such polls in the unlikely case that youd really be interested and didnt just want to rant a bit) of course you can ignore those numbers, im sure its easier that way. but accurate it is not, not by the slightest.

the public opinion in germany about the US is definetly on an all time low right now, that is true (i find that pretty ridiculous btw, because the distrust is mostly directed at george bush, thus a general distrust towards americans is as if all americans were george bush, which last time i checked they were not :-) before bush started to talk about a second iraq war though, the public opinion about the US was on an all time high, and the loyalty was so big that unlike the other times, supporting the US in afghanistan as a reaction to 911 wasnt debated at all - that was pretty exceptional, cause normally thats the way it goes in pacifistic cuddle-germany (TM).

to ignore a logical connection with the second iraq war but draw a connection 16 years into the past is pretty artificial. of course neither i nor all numbers and public opinion polls in the world will change your opinion about this. but since you guys dig non-non-judgmentalism so much, i will make it a point to publicly call it "more bullshit" here for you.
in my humble i-happen-to-live-in-the-place-you-talk-about-opinion of course.

>You're welcome.

see, thats the interesting discussion about "who or what political concept ended the cold war" i talked about.
could have been nice. of course, by saying "youre welcome", youre taking the credit, thus i assume your opinion on this is that it was YOU, neil aka the united states of america, that ended the cold war.
you said something different in the beginning of your post, but whatever.

>I'll talk with you about Israel some other time.

funny how i saw that one coming...

have a nice day.No.....that's not what I said and you're obviously not getting this at all. Let's return to the original disagreement about stereotypes. Like it or not, they exist. they are the detrius of our respective cultural heritage.
Whether this is considered to be good or bad is not even an issue. It just is reality. I'kll guarantee you that the French have cultural differences and that b\ased on those differences, certain assumptions can be made. Are you denying this?

I think they are pretty damned handy as I would certainly like to know a bit about the cultural background of person if he or she is Jewish or Muslim and I'm planning a dinner party with suckling pig as the main course.

As for your apparent unwillingness to accept what I have seen with my own eyes after it was pointed out to me by a bunch of people who had absolutely no preconceptions about the cultural proclivities of these individuals who happened to be Euopeans and Americans all I can say is believe what you want.

I will, don't have time to get into long posts right now - just little snippets here & there as I do other stuff - but I agree with you that it was not just one of those factors, but all of them combined to one degree or another.

Wow, nice string of names dude.... thats how you conduct discourse?

Asshole.your statement completely ignores my very point, the early nineties, mr. rabin, the one point in history where they were as close to solving the conflict as they were never before and after. arafat actually had power because he could show his people results, so he could actually effectively prevent terror, and hear hear, terror was on a all time low.

but thats not worth mentioning with even one single word huh?

your basically ignoring my very point. q.e.d.

oh, and about the option to just nuke the palestinans to hell, well im sure the jewish seddlers would have been very amused, and of course isreal wouldnt mind poisoning their own country by dropping a couple of nukes in the direct neighbourhood of their sacred city and land.

thats about as realistic as milwaukee reserving the right to nuke chicago in case of ongoing disagreement. very good.
im sure chicago is very thankful that they didnt do it to this day.

oh, and about the "will you live under a mullah", well, of course not. youre missing the point. we all have the same goals.

we only disagree about what is the best path to these goals.
its a shame that there seems to be NO way at all to have a basic discussion about the possible different paths to this goal and it all automatically leads to the auto-anti-liberal-blah routine. here i am, writing about how i do NOT think that george bush is the devil, how i do believe we all have the same goals, how i am only interested in a general force vs deescalation discussion again and again, starting with the example of mr. rabin, the only man known to me that ever managed to reduce terror in israel by a significant amount. i find that really interesting. and until now, not ONE SINGLE WORD about that in all responses. NOT ONE.

instead i get some "you hate americans so much" type
of antiliberal standard blah blah. its ridiculous, really.

but then, i can take that as an answer just as well.

Errmmmm... those weren't cut-downs.

Bostonian.
(though THAT might be considered one LOL)(sigh).....and furthermore, whether you want it to be about Iraq.....everything is about Iraq.....and was for a long time before we took Sadaam out if the premise of the United Nations being a viable entity has any validity at all. I appreciate that Germany supported the US during the time that Bill Clinton was sitting on his ass allowing us to be dealt under the table by the French, Russians and the UN bureaucrats.
Germany did support France when it insisted it would block US efforts to use force to disarm Iraq. The whole ridiculous premise of this was that somehow the inspectors would be effective when for 10 years Iraq had been obstructing them. Villepin actually said, and I quote....."It is important that Europe speaks on this issue with a single voice." "We are mobilized; we believe war can be avoided." .....while France was buying Iraqi oil under the table. Gerhard Shroeder found the antiwar line to be a convenient reelection tool which tells me a lot. His words of support for America were
"Do not expect that Germany will agree to a resolution that legitimizes war" while conveniently forgetting that the war, which Germany legitimized by virtue of it's participation in 1991 had not ended as long as Sadaam was in violation of the UN sanctions.

Doug

just as you i said that i believe that its a little of everything. of course that includes, on behalf of all american forces, you. thank you neil. your partially responsible for the end of the cold war. since i, on behalf of the deescalation politics of willy brandt, am also responsible and the US also wanted the cold war to end, will you thank me too now?

as to the rest, whats there to say when you completely ignore all of my points...

- about germany and the possibility that it might NOT have been a case of complete sucky ungratefulness but a case of strong disagreement about the second iraq war (even more likely since germany wasnt exactly the only nation that didnt agree)? nothing.

- the stuff i say that im interested in instead of the useless standard bullshit? israel, rabin anyone? anyone care to loose a word about the only man that ever effectively reduced terror in israel? nada.

instead, theres this:

right Derek. Everyone misses the point except you...

The only problem with your theory is the fact that Arafat was one of the chief terrorists, utterly corrupt, and a major part of the problem.

What was wrong, exactly with the plan proposed by Clinton?

>oh, and about the option to just nuke the palestinans to hell,

Clever words, but it is possible to expel them before nuking them isn't it? Seems do-able. You send them all to Syria, and nuke the whole lot of them. The fact is, they did not, and neither did we, yet to you it is all the same "brutality". It is not.

Can you agree? What would the ghouls and head-choppers do with our weapons? What would the palestinians do with them?

Why is there no peace? Be honest.

>oh, and about the "will you live under a mullah", well, of course

What is your plan to avoid this?

I don't care about liberals or conservatives for that matter. Is it possible that your way has been tried and failed? That when the ghouls kill innocent people that they must be stopped? Seems possible to me. I'd love to hear your plan of course.

>here i am,

The people who think bush is the devil are stupid, so it buys you little credit to not be one of them.

Ok, so what were the substantive differences between what Rabin was offering, and what Clinton brokered? Were they not nearly identical? Doesn't your point rely on Arafat not being a terrorist himself? Evidence?

>instead i get some "you hate americans so much" type
>of antiliberal standard blah blah. its ridiculous, really.

Never said that. I always approach europeans with an open mind, hoping to find a new perspective. I had many german friends in college and took german for a year. I am inclined to listen and like europeans as long as they are willing to understand our side.

You will have your own opportunity to show your more enlightened solutions, I am sure. This is likely to get worse before it gets better.

Here is why appeasement is more likely to end in nuclear war than is the war on terror. Euros in particular, because war has become unthinkable to them, are more likely to wait too long to respond, and then find themselves in such desperate conditions, tactically, that there are no other options but massive destruction. Fight them there, or fight them here. You pick, but it can happen to you too.

So tell me, what part of Rabin's plans would you use today to de-escalate?
